Dean Discusses Essential Quality in Love, Marriage Lecture Series

Mutual and individual development in four areas of maturity was stressed as necessary in preparing for marriage, in a lecture by Roy M. Green, Dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture, in the Love and Marriage series Wednesday night.

Green spoke on "Readiness for Marriage" at the seventh in a group of 12 lectures sponsored by the Campus Improvement Committee of the Student Council.

HE LISTED six major factors in determining readiness for marriage.

First, the two persons involved must agree on the type of home they are going to establish. They should realize that the two individual personalities entering into the marriage relationship are going to constantly change. Moral maturity is very important in preparing for marriage, Green stated. The two persons involved should develop relatively stable and similar ideas toward life, religion and social problems.

GREEN BELIEVES that emotional maturity is second in importance to moral maturity. The emotionally mature person should be able to control his emotions, think independently and be independent of home environment.

Intellectual maturity, Green said, includes the ability to successfully hold a job and manage business affairs. The intellectually mature person also desires to continue learning independently of others.

IN THE area of social maturity, the ability to adjust to changing conditions socially is highly desirable, Green added. The mature person can meet social situations with poise and is interested in quiet diversions rather than continual excitement in social life.

Although no one can be perfect in all these items, Green believes they are important factors in determining readiness for marriage. He stressed the fact that moral and emotional maturity can build up good social and intellectual maturity.

The next lecture on Love and Marriage will be held on March 17.

Sociology Professor Defends Modern Art

Abstracts Designed To Protest

Abstract art as a form of protest against the aesthetic tradition of visual reproduction was explained and discussed by Dr. Paul Meadows, professor of sociology, in a lecture "Art as Protest," Tuesday.

First of a new series of art lectures at the Morrill Hall Gallery, the talk attempted not to explain modern art so much as to justify and evaluate it.

POINTING OUT the dialectic pattern of this modern protest, Dr. Meadows showed how each new form embodies something of the preceding ones. "The revolutionary art of one generation becomes the genteel, accepted art of the next, just as a heretic who is burned at the stake in one century is proclaimed as a saint in another," he stated. It is the pattern of art that revolutionary forms become grafted on to the conservative methods.

After expressing the opinion that one of the values of the dialectic pattern has been to accord the appreciator of art the same privilege as the painter, the right to be different and to protest to those who attempt to dictate what the public should enjoy and accept, he enumerated three specific values of art as protest.

THE DIALECTIC pattern of art has, Dr. Meadows stated, demonstrated the incalculable possibilities of incongruities. "It Directing rhythm bands, teaching square dancing and helping publish a newspaper are a part of the activities engaged in by Red Cross Gray Lady assistants working at the State Mental Hospital.

Under the direction of chairman Joyce Laase, the coeds work in the wards—talking to the patients, writing letters and directing musical choruses. They conduct art and handicraft classes which are held for occupational therapy purposes.

SPEECH ACTIVITIES are also included in the agenda. Coeds help the patients in drama work and speech therapy. "Hospital Highlights," the newspaper published by the patients is also under the Gray Ladies' supervision.

Birthday parties are planned for the patients and University talent shows travel to the hospital to entertain the patients.

Before a coed can become a Gray Lady assistant, she must fulfill certain requirements. They include a letter of permission from her parents, an interview with the hospital psychiatrist and participation in a worker-training program.

10th REUNION CLASS OF '54

MEET YOURSELF—10 YEARS FROM NOW

Ever wonder what you'll be like when the class of '54 holds its 10th reunion? If you started to work for one of the Bell System companies after graduation, here's a pretty good idea.

INTERESTING, RESPONSIBLE WORK: Perhaps a Commercial Manager, the company's representative and spokesman to as many as fifty thousand customers. Or a Transmission Engineer, helping to provide the telephone needs of an entire state. Or a Supervisor in the Traffic Department, responsible for the speed and quality of local and long distance service in several cities and for the personnel relations of a large number of employees.

WE MAKE SURE THERE ARE PLACES TO GO: The number of college men hired is related to the number of administrative and technical positions expected to be available in the next 10 or 15 years. It is our policy to fill these positions from within our organization.

ARTS, SCIENCE, BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION AND ENGINEERING GRADUATES are among our particular needs. The specific degree is not as important as the total effect of your college training.

NO MATTER WHAT YOUR MILITARY STATUS, contact your Placement Officer soon for details on the opportunities for employment with the Bell System.
