A University student, who had three hour-exams in one day—at 9, 10 and 11 o'clock—studied late the night before and decided to skip the 8 a.m. class so that he could take the tests "with a clear mind."

At 8:15 a.m. he arose from his dormitory bed and went to his room to dress for class. The pajama-clad figure was astonished to find that his roommate had locked the door. In addition, his key was locked in the room and to add insult to injury, no other key existed.

His only alternative was to call all three professors and explain that he would be unable to take the tests because he had no clothes to wear.

Dance Lessons

Free jitterbug lessons will be available to University students at a Union dance class Wednesday from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Miss Donna McCandless, a former Arthur Murray instructor, will give both beginning and advanced instruction. Classes are sponsored by the Union dance committee.

The day of the "big rain" the Political Science instructor arrived a little late for his class. He found the class in an uproar—his speaker's rostrum had been hidden, a waste-basket put in its place, and a large uncomplimentary sketch of "teacher" on the board with "Mr. _____" written under it.

He paused a moment, looked critically at the drawing and, picking up a piece of chalk, said quietly "There's a 'd' in my name."
