

Howell Theater Facilities Named

Improved Seating Arrangement, New Lighting Equipment Featured

Ejected from their home two years ago, University actors and actresses will be able to return to a revamped version of it this summer.

The Howell Memorial Theater, which will replace the former Temple Theater, will be ready for limited use this summer after two years of construction and three years of planning.

Its use will be limited use until technicians become accustomed to the new sound, lighting and staging equipment. The theater will be officially dedicated in October.

THREE HUNDRED seventy-eight softly upholstered, self-rising seats will accommodate a capacity is somewhat smaller than that of the Temple theater, each member of the audience will have an unobstructed view of the stage. The pitch of the high slope of the auditorium from front to back and the "staggering" of the seats will permit each

Love Library To Stay Open Extra Hour

Love Memorial Library will remain open one hour later than usual, until 10:20 p.m., during the first week of final examinations.

The policy will be in effect Monday through Thursday May 24 through May 27. On Monday, May 31, a legal holiday because Memorial Day falls on Sunday, the library will remain open on regular schedule, 7:50 a.m. to 9:20 p.m.

The library on Ag Campus will observe the same hours as Love Library.

Personnel will be on hand to receive theses in the Technical Service Division during the regular office hours on Monday, May 31.

All books borrowed by undergraduate students will be due to the libraries by June 5, the last day of examinations. Also at this time all indebtedness incurred by student for lost books or fines will be due at this time. Grades, diplomas or transcripts will not be issued until these debts are paid.

member of the audience to view the stage directly. All of the light installation and electronic light control is new. This will allow for more flexibility, greater control of lights and color light units, and more simplicity in operation, which will produce much more subtle lighting effects.

A COMBINATION of speakers, microphones and turntables will produce sound effects which were impossible under the old sound-producing system. Sound and lighting controls will be located in a booth in back of the balcony.

Stage improvements include new draperies and a 12-foot by 14-foot elevator in the center of the stage which operates from the basement to three feet above the floor of the stage. It will be used to bring property from the storage room in the basement to the stage to achieve special effects in plays.

THE HOWELL Memorial Theater is more than a remodeling of the Temple Theater; it is really a renovation of it. The only parts of the Temple Theater used in the new theater are the outside walls, the ceiling and some of the foundations.

Stage space is 12 feet wider than before, and beneath it the stage, a property workshop, showers, plumbing and property storage space are located.

UNLIKE Temple Theater, the Howell Memorial Theater has a main entrance which is separated from the remaining part of Temple Building. Six steps lead to the two double-doors which face N. 12th St.

The theater will be dedicated to Miss H. Alice Howell, chairman of speech at the University for more than 30 years. The estimated cost of the construction is $400,000.

"The theater was renovated by the University for the University," Dallas S. Williams, assistant professor of speech and dramatic art, said. "Any University organization can request and will probably be encouraged to use the new theater, although its seating capacity may make the presentation of some programs unwise."

Gungho, Fabuli, Crazy Campi; NU Spring Arrives—No Guff

Late Heat Wave Brings Convertibles, No Studies

By MARCIA MICKELSON Staff Writer

Gungho, it's spring. Spring has come to Nebraska, bringing with it the lull that follows any heat wave. Students have taken time off from panic-stricken schedules and activities to live it up a little.

They say that it all took place because of a slight commotion. A little party on 16th Street that turned fabuli. They're saying that things in general haven't been the same since, and things in specific well? Maybe they haven't returned to normal at that.

Spring is a very crazy mixed up time of year. It brings its own sports of a very definitely specialized variety which are limited to the cool college camp. These sports may never be played up on the sports page, but nevertheless, they do add up to fun and games.

TAKE, FOR instance, convertible cruising. I'd like to tell you one thing. As I write this story, I myself am caught up in the glamour of the top down, the boot snapped in place if it still fits and the sunglasses on. When can you leave?

As one housemother of a campus sorority group was heard to say, the girls are all out—"jeans on, shorties out, and running for a roadster." Perhaps that is a just description of today's modern coed. No losers, all winners.

It isn't that I am particularly gungho about convertibles, it's just that I mostly enjoy the follow up sport—being doused with garden hoses set up on 16th Street by members of Fraternity Row to catch all vulnerable open-air vehicles. Oh, those tricky push button windows. (This story was written from the inside, looking out). Care for a quick swim? Dig those crazy pool sides—red leather upholstery already wet.

ANOTHER FANTASTIC fun and games diversion of this season involves convertibles too. The "object" of this game is to see who can toss the most water filled balloons into cars. The theme this gang of "little hoods" seem to be operating on is win a few, lose a few. Who can tell about this micky-mousing.

I have so far neglected the most tremendous of all summer sports—sunbathing. This is being done with a great deal of variety this year. It all resulted from lack of sunning space. The latest jag in this field is the use of the fire escapes for beaches. Dig those crazy zebra-type stripes. Once again, I find myself on the inside looking out. Bars. Always bars.

Oh well, I'll console myself. I don't mind being a loser. It's not so terrible. As a matter of fact, on this campus it's great. No guff.

Applications For Two Ag Boards Due Friday
