

Yearbook Names Beauty Queens

Nebraska's Centennial Anniversary Selected For Cornhusker Theme

Six Nebraska co-eds were modestly revealed in the colorful 1954 Cornhusker as the Beauty Queens of the University Campus.

Out west, namely Alliance, Nebraska, two beauties were transplanted to the eastern part of the state, namely the University. The girls are Gretchen Winkler and Rita-Al Goding.

HOMETOWN LINCOLN was also adequately represented by Allison Faulkner, Geneva by Marymaude Bedford, and Columbus by Gall Drabota. Outstate Iowa was represented by Sue Melhaupt from Des Moines.

Each beauty queen was photographed in an almost three-dimensional view showing popular hair styles and Vogue earrings. Each girl was also pictured working in the field of her major.

The theme of the Cornhusker—"the Centennial Year" marks Nebraska's 100 years of existence as a territory. This theme was used because the occasion happens so seldom, Miss Barbara Adams, retiring editor of the Cornhusker said. "And while it does not seem too important to students at the time, they should at least be aware of the fact that this is Nebraska's 100th anniversary."

ON THE cover of the publication is a tall yellow cornstalk outlined on the solid, dull-aqua background. This cornstalk is again portrayed on some of the following division pages which add unity to the yearbook. Even more unifying, however, is a figure of two intersecting lines which meet in the center of a one-half inch circle. This figure indirectly suggests that the lines leading to the small circle are 100 years prior to the Centennial; the circle is the epoch-making year, and the lines leading from the circle are the years in the future.

Miss Carol Haerer, a senior in Teachers College who recently won a Fulbright scholarship to study in France, designed the cover and the division pages. She and Miss Adams collaborated in 1950 as art editor and editor to make the North Platte yearbook an All-American publication.

Barbara Bell was associate editor of the yearbook and Jo Knapp, Mary Jane Mapes and Nancy Odum were managing editors. Murt Pickett and Bernie Rosenquist acted as layout editors and Ann Skold and Ann Jovenat worked as panel editors. Ann Launer was copy editor. J. Benedict was business manager.

Purposeful Parties Planned

By BARBARA CLARK Staff Writer

Everyone loves a party! Marilyn Beideck, entertainment co-ordinator, plans parties for institutions served by the Red Cross College Unit.

An example of her work was an auditorium show planned for patients at the Orthopedic Hospital during Easter season. The theme of the show was "Easter Under the Sea" featuring acts from Lincoln High's Joy Night, "Under the Sea."

"Flying fish," "Lost Jewels." Mysterious sea characters cavorted across the state in a variety of sea fantasy numbers. Before the show "Lobster Bopsters" dressed in pink lobster costumes paraded through the audience passing out favors and balloons to the children.

Another auditorium show featuring University and city talent was presented to the patients at Veteran's Hospital. During the latter part of the show patients had a chance to demonstrate their skill in balloon and straw races and candy-eating contests.

Miss Beideck's future plans as entertainment co-ordinator include establishing a talent file to be used in selecting entertainment for the various institutions. A committee will be organized this fall to keep in contact with each of the institutions served by Red Cross for the purpose of arranging entertainment.
