Howell Theater Named For First Play Coach

The Howell Memorial Theater will be dedicated on Sunday, Oct. 24, in honor of Miss H. Alice Howell, who taught for forty years in the University drama department.

Always remembered as an inspiring leader with a crusading spirit, Miss Howell organized a Dramatic Club, incorporated the University Players into a stock company, and was one of the first women from Nebraska to enter Red Cross service during the first World War. She left for France in the spring of 1918 and during the time spent overseas continued her theatrical activities by playing with the John Craig Players.

Miss Howell received her A.B. degree from Washington University, studied oratory two years at Emerson College in Boston, and entered the University in 1900. In 1901 she directed the first of many plays at the University. She remained the only instructor of dramatic art until 1910 when the department was enlarged.

Frances Vogel Assumes Post In Ellen Smith

A new assistant to the dean of women, Mrs. Frances Vogel, will greet coeds who enter Ellen Smith Hall this year. Mrs. Vogel, who describes her new duties as "a little bit of everything," replaces Miss Mary Augustine, dean's assistant since 1948, who will be married this fall.

Mrs. Vogel began her new job July 1, but campus life and activities are still new to her, since "it was very quiet until the last two weeks." She and her husband just moved to Lincoln this summer and she was impressed with the friendliness of the city and felt at home right away, she commented.

ALWAYS REMEMBERED as an inspiring leader with a crusading spirit, Miss Howell organized a Dramatic Club, incorporated the University Players into a stock company, and was one of the first women from Nebraska to enter Red Cross service during the first World War. She left for France in the spring of 1918 and during the time spent overseas continued her theatrical activities by playing with the John Craig Players.

A member of the Overseas Women Association, Pi Epsilon Delta, Mortar Board and Pi Beta Phi, Miss Howell gave many public recitals and lectures and once a season appeared in a leading role with the University Players. Under her leadership the department grew rapidly until in 1930 the staff included eight instructors and the enrollment in drama was more than six hundred students.

MISS HOWELL liked plays with heroic situations and others with good comedy parts, but she offered different styles and variety to her audiences. She thought the movies had been disastrous to the stage, but that they would eventually create better actors and plays for the stage.

After twenty-five years at the University she said, "We have never called a show off . . . the players have always showed splendid cooperation, reliability, and loyalty . . . they have always risen to the occasion . . . the freedom from jealousy and selfishness has been most inspirational to me . . . the property and stage crews have added as much to the productions as the actors themselves . . ."

In March, 1940, Miss Howell directed her last play "Doddsforth." She retired in the spring of that year.

University Coeds Tour Mexico, Europe; Conventions, Jobs Fill Summer Vacation

By PHYLLIS HERSHBERGER
Staff Writer

Europe attracted several coeds during the summer while others were content to work or travel in the United States.

Marilyn Mitchell and Jane Aistrup were among those traveling to Europe. One of the highlights of Marilyn's trip was watching Churchill arrive home from Parliament, complete with several "bobby" escorts, his cane, cigar and black hat.

An art major, Jane was most interested in the Louvre, a museum in Paris where De Vinci's "Mona Lisa" hangs. She also enjoyed conversing with a German teenager who had escaped across the border to see his brother. The youth told her he thought of Americans as "crazy beboppers," but was astonished to discover that American young people did not have to work or march after school as he did.

Other Europe visitors were Mary Egan, Tish Low, Nancy Swerre, Jeanne Grieving and Artie Hill.

Attending the national Gamma Phi Beta convention on Mackinac Island, Mich., were Sharon Mangold, Jackie Switzer, Sally McGlasson, Janie Mapes and Jean Steffen. Because no cars are permitted on the island, the girls, as well as residents, used horses and buggies for transportation, Sharon said.

Eileen Sabin spent the summer working as a guide in the United Nations building in New York City. She said that an average of 2000 people toured the building every day. One of her fellow guides was Wiwan Worawan, daughter of Prince Wan Waitayakon, UN delegate and foreign minister from Thailand.

Traveling to Mexico was Barbara Jelgerhuis, who enjoyed watching bullfights and swimming in

Cotner Offers Religion Study, Scholarship

Hindus, Buddhists, Jews, Catholics and protestants study together at the Cotner School of religion recently constructed at 1237 R Street. Although the Cotner School is sponsored by the Christian Church, the classes are non-denominational in purpose and spirit.

Bible study, church histories, and religions of the world are some of the classes offered. The building serves a dual purpose. Besides housing classrooms, it is the center for the combined Baptist-Disciple student fellowship.

Although the University of Nebraska is not organically related to Cotner College, credits earned there are accepted at the University. E. M. Hawkins, instructor at Cotner, says that a free scholarship is offered to students who have paid the maximum tuition at the University.

the pool of Gardenings at Fortin. Also in Mexico was Glenna Berry who studied at the University of Mexico in Mexico City.

Gretchen DeVries was a deck nurse for St. John's Floating hospital for underprivileged children. Every day the ship cruised in New York Harbor while children on the ship received medical, dental or psychological treatment.

PITTSBURGH, New York City and Chicago were visited by Polly Boulton on her trip to the East coast where she vacationed at Cape Cod Mass. Nan Engler accompanied her parents to the West coast.

The national Delta Delta Delta convention at White Silver Springs, W. Va. was attended by Marian Ekstrom and Clare Hinman.

Occupying Kay Burcum's summer was the YWCA Students in Industry in Los Angeles. She worked in a factory during the daytime and attended seminars led by labor leaders and experts in the evening. Lichu Chen was part of a similar group in Minneapolis.

YWCA president, Joyce Laase, spent the summer at a Rocky Mountains Region YW-YMCA conference at Estes, Colo.; at the West Coast Leadership School for YW-YMCA campus leaders in Berkeley, Calif.; and at Oxford, Ohio, where she was a delegate to the National Council at which various student groups are represented.

Grant-In-Aid Drive Nets Over $8000

The $40,000 Grant-In-Aid Fund drive being conducted by the University Alumni Association is 20 per cent completed. Total receipts up until Friday were $8,479.50, according to James S. Pittenger, Alumni secretary.

The drive has resulted in 461 donations averaging slightly more than $18 each. Contributions have ranged from $1 to $500.

Money raised will be used to provide scholarships to athletes who are scholastically able to meet University requirements. Scholarships will be handled through the University Scholarship Committee.

The drive is part of an overall athletic scholarship plan approved by the University regents, Big Seven officials and National Collegiate Athletic Association. It will increase the number of full athletic scholarships to 109.

Elsworth Du Teau, chairman of the Grant-In-Aid campaign committee, told the committee at a luncheon that a personal solicitation campaign for "Big Red" club contributions will be launched throughout the country shortly.

Du Teau also said that an appeal was being made to civic groups to sponsor one athlete for a year's Grant-In Aid scholarship. This would amount to $865 for an in-state student and $1,025 for an out-of-state student, he added.

Two Kansas State Profs Added To NU Ag Faculty

Two professors from Kansas State College, Dr. Franklin E. Eldridge and Dr. Florence McKinney, have joined the staff of the College of Agriculture.

Eldridge, new associate director of resident instruction, was very impressed with the "friendly attitude" of both students and faculty on the NU campus. He also praised the University's activity and service organizations.

"Ataturk is to be a service institution," Frolk said. "It will help bring together existing parts of the many Turkish agencies which do not operate from a central institution."

"This proposed university is a good thing," Frolk continued, "and the Turkish government is ready to support it all the way."

THE SECOND group of Nebraskans will stop in Washington, D.C. before flying to Istanbul. The group plans to return to Lincoln sometime in November.

The six men making the trip are: W. V. Lambert, dean of the College of Agriculture; Carl Olson Jr., chairman of the department of animal pathology and hygiene; Roy M. Green, dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture; Knute O. Broady, director of University Extension Division; A. T. Anderson, associate professor of history, and Elvin F. Frolk, chairman of the department of agronomy.

pressed with the friendly campus, is the new chairman of the Home Economics Department.

Eldridge began his college career at a small church college in McPherson, Kansas. He transferred to the University of Idaho, where he received his Bachelor of Science degree in Agriculture. He then attended Kansas State College and received his Master's degree there. Following a tour of duty with the Army, Eldridge returned to college, this time to Cornell, where he received his Ph. D. degree.

Eldridge replaces Dr. Ephraim Hixson, who resigned Sept. 1.

McKINNEY, WHO COMES to Nebraska with approximately 20 years of teaching experience, received her Bachelor's degree from Kansas State, her Masters degree from Iowa State, and her Ph. D. degree from Ohio State.

McKinney has taught vocational homemaking in various high schools and before coming to Nebraska was head of the Department of Household Economics and Family Finance at Kansas State. McKinney replaces Dr. Doretta Schlaphoff.
