Changing Attitude Affects NU Elite

By NAT KATT
Staff Writer

Senioritis!!
This is a disease affecting one-fourth of the campus every year. It can be recognized by the changes in the dating habits and attitudes of the elite senior class members.

To a freshman, college is an overwhelming and confusing experience. To a sophomore, college is a mass of organizations, activities and coffee-dates. Juniors know college as a tense year of working on activities, making grades and, in general, living it up.

But to seniors, college has a new meaning and significance.

It is the year students realize they will soon be faced with the responsibility of getting a job, of keeping a wife or maybe a family. In only eight months many will begin applying practically what they have been learning in theory for four years.

Many senior women are pinned, engaged or even married. The remainder, and there are many, find dating material limited. They have fewer (if any) blind dates, prefer older men and think in terms other than male.

Marriage Barrier

The pinned and engaged women anxiously await graduation as the barrier to be overcome before marriage. Bridal books hold their interest considerably more than work on Penny Carnival or that new boy in Poli Sci class.

Like the women, many senior men are married or attached and thus feel obligated to study this year so they will be able "to make it on their own" next year, if they aren't already.

The senior men who are free have a different attitude. The next couple years of their life are already planned for most of them—a career in uniform. Thus, they decide to really "live it up" this last year and develop an "I don't care" attitude.

In looking around for new women to impress, the senior males turn to dating freshmen women. In turn, these freshmen are thrilled when an upperclassman asks them out and have fun even if they aren't always quite sure what their dates are talking about.

Eligible For DBG

Almost all seniors are legally eligible for Friday afternoon sessions at the DBG. This is the one place you can discuss the class of '51 and someone else remembers it.

Seniors realize there is more to a successful college life than being a queen, speaking to the right people and just-getting-by scholastically.

Many close and lasting friendships are made in a college career, especially after struggling through hard courses with the same persons several years.

Seniors sit back serenely and watch the underclassmen worrying about their average or what to take next year and give a sigh of relief. But given the chance, every senior knows he would do it over again.

TERESA WRIGHT says: "Up to 16, my knowledge of acting had been gleaned from seeing movies. When I saw my first professional play, that was it: I only wanted to act. I got into high school plays, wrestled props at Provincetown, understudied, sat for months in producers' reception rooms. One rainy night, sick with a cold, I read for a good role, and got it!"
