Two Ag Students Instruct Inmates

By GARY BURCHFIELD
Ag Editor
Two Ag College seniors are this year taking part in one of the most unusual programs of the University Education Department.

majoring in Vocational Education at the University. At the Reformatory, Hall conducts classes for the fifth grade level and Stuckenholz teaches Vocational Agriculture. Their students are men of varied ages, races and ability.

Education For Inmates
According to Dr. W. T. Carroll, Educational Director at the institution, the school, called Hawthorne Drive School, is the formal part of the Reformatory. The entire institution is for the education and rehabilitation of the inmates.

important than formal education." The aim of the education department is to develop well-rounded educational development.

Classes at the institution are conducted on the honor basis. The teacher is in charge of the class and no guards are in classrooms during classes.

The school, which operates on the University calendar, conducts classes from the first grade through necessary, since many of the inmates have almost no educational background.

Courses Offered
Classes are five days a week from 6 to 9 p.m. Although not required to attend school, nearly all of the 248 inmates do.

Classes offered include commercial arts, music, vocational agriculture and all academic courses. A course in religion is also offered. Correspondence courses, both on high school and college level, are available through the University Extension Division.

The institution also has a library of approximately 8,000 books, which are available to inmates.

According to Dr. Carroll, the classes are just about typical of a public school, and the per cent of good attitudes is better than average.

Upon entering the institution, a new man is classified as a "fish." He spends his first few days in the "fish tank," which is actually a classification center. In the classification center, the new inmate is given a physical examination, finger-printed, photographed, and given a number. He is also interviewed by the parole officer, superintendent and assistant superintendent, and the educational director or his assistant.

Inmates Give Tests
Following the interviewing, the new man is given individual intelligence tests, according to whether or not he is literate.

The new man is then given the appropriate academic achievement tests to determine what level he will be placed in, either grade school or high school. The term "level" is used instead of class.

The inmate stays in this level until he progresses through the 8th grade and is given a diploma. He may then go on to high school and earn a high school diploma.

The school, approved by the Department of Public Instruction, is an important factor in the rehabilitation of the inmates. According to Howard Hall, "The men are willing to learn, and they need help. I feel that I am not only gaining experience, but also helping these men to become better citizens when they leave here."

The Men Behind The Men Behind The Hotdogs, Or...

Who's Too Old To Cut Mustard?

By FRED DALY
Staff Writer

College football games are renowned for their vibrant color, artery-clogging drama and mad, wild excitement. The air rings with the cries of the players, the swelling roar of the crowd, the gruff voice of the loud-speaker and the staccato bark of the peanut vendors.

The packed stands rise tier upon tier of violent reds, greens, helios, blues and browns above the vast kelly sweep of the neatly-mowed field. Pink shirts sit shoulder to shoulder with pale cashmires, and the mahogany glint of undergraduate pipes is accented by the afternoon sun.

Hot Hotdogs
A very festive scene it is, and 38,000 hearts pound wildly with spontaneous enthusiasm. Hearts are light, eyes are bright, skin tingles healthily in the crisp breeze and the vendors do a brisk turnover in coffee and hotdogs.

It is hard to imagine that, in a scene such as this, there toils in the darkness of the East stadium two young men. Vital cogs in this drama, they are nevertheless shut out from all except the faint whispers of Lyle Bremser crackling over a Zenith radio.

The Men
They are the men behind the men behind the hotdogs. Their names are E. J. Cripe and Stan Schneider, juniors at the University. Every home game morning they roll from their cots in the faint hours of the dawn, ready to begin work at 8 a.m. Their day ends at 5 p.m., when there is nothing left of the game but old coffee cups, rolled-up programs and twisted eye-shades.

Their first task is the separation of 3000 hotdogs. They arrive in strings of 500 hotdogs each. Lacing precision instruments, they must sever the strings attaching these 3000 hotdogs together, using nothing but their bare hands and brute strength.

Pre-Sliced Buns
The hotdog buns arrive pre-sliced in 375 packages of eight buns each. Mustard must be carefully slapped into each bun before it receives its freshly steam-cooked hotdog.

After cooking, the hotdogs are inserted in the buns, one in each bun. They are then rolled in tissue and counted out to the 13 concession stands and the ten hotdog vendors.

Coffee is sold too, 90 gallons of it. Six vendors disperse themselves through the stands, peddling the brew prepared by Cripe and Schneider in their warm little room under the stands.

The Men's Lonely Life
Their day almost over, the two guardians of the public's digestive system bend their elbows to cleaning pots, pans and mustard-lapper sticks in preparation for next Saturday's game. Occasionally they can dash up for a few snatches of the game, progress before they must turn their backs on the color and excitement and return to their lonely roles of the men behind the men behind the hotdogs.

University Budget . . .

will be used to strengthen the instructional program. This would include, the Chancellor explained, the hiring of a professor of classical history and the hiring of approximately six instructors who would specialize in teaching freshman English.

Additional expenses in the development program provide for the addition of approximately 200 new University employees, who would be mostly instructors or part-time faculty members, Bruce Nicoll, administrative assistant to the Chancellor, said.

In addition to the $23,624,581.52 budget, the University is requesting the Legislature to reappropriate revolving funds totaling $9,603,820. These funds are derived from self-supporting activities requiring no tax funds, such as dormitory systems, dining halls, the Union, student health center, intercollegiate athletics and tractor testing.

The four principal expenditures in the proposed 1955-57 budget, including state tax funds, federal funds, student fees and endowments, are: College of Agriculture, $6,290,453; University Medical Center in Omaha, $4,098,321; College of Arts and Sciences, $2,572,745; Division of Buildings and Grounds, $2,445,098.

Other budget allocations are: General Administration, $811,890; general University services, $1,432,165; College of Business Administration, $477,060; College of Dentistry, $407,200.

College of Engineering, $809,380; School of Fine Arts, $562,980; School of Journalism, $77,000; College of Law, $264,444; College of Pharmacy, $149,160; Teachers College, $1,062,090; Graduate College, $43,290; Graduate School of Social Work, $84,590.

Summer School, $403,604; special instruction, $114,348; University Extension, $214,250; Library, $806,400; Museum, $109,030; scholarships and fellowships, $70,800; sundry equipment, $100,000 and organized research, $337,280.

TV Channel . . .

ing" on stations in Lincoln and Omaha. KUON-TV will, however, bring Nebraska its first exclusive educational channel.

University Television is now televising a series of half-hour programs on KOLN-TV entitled "Great Plains Trilogy." This series is presented by Dr. E. Mott Davis, assistant professor of anthropology and curator of anthropology in the University State Museum, and Marvin F. Kivett, director of the Nebraska State Historical Society Museum.

University Television, however, while directing KUON-TV, will continue to do public service programs for competitive television stations.

The television broadcasts are being introduced as a result of a directive of the University Board of Regents.

That the University give cooperation to Byron Dunn, trustee of the new station, in program operations. Channel 12 was assigned to Dunn from Cornhusker Radio and Television Corporation, which operates station KOLN-TV, in action by the Federal Communications Commission last July.

The trusteeship arrangement was worked out because the University does not now have authority or funds to accept an offer to buy the facilities of Channel 12 for about $100,000, and for other considerations.

At the end of this fiscal year next June 30, the Board of Regents could decide either to continue the arrangement under limited conditions, funds, facilities and personnel or to purchase the facilities for Channel 12.

The University, under the arrangement approved by the FCC, has until July 1, 1956, to make a decision on the purchase.

Biz Ad Tickets Now On Sale
