

Waring Once Penn State Banjazzra Band Member

Original Group Numbered Ten

Fred Waring, who with the rest of The Pennsylvanians will give his 1954-55 show at the Coliseum Sunday, made his first successful attempt to crash the music world with a group of ten college musicians known as the Banjazzra.

Born 54 years ago in Tyrone, Pa., Waring began his musical career as leader of a local Drum and Bugle Corps. This first "band" played at local parties and school functions. From this beginning, The Pennsylvanians were indirectly born.

Student Section

Tickets for the University presentation of the Waring show have re-opened at both the City and Ag Unions. A specially priced section for students is offered with seats selling for $1.50. The performance will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Waring's interest in music grew when he enrolled at Penn State to study architectural engineering. While at school his band began to take weekend jobs at fraternity dances.

At this time Waring's band became known as The Banjazzra because of the predominance of banjos. This same group of 10 boys, who alternately played 40 instruments were soon known as The Pennsylvanians, the name they are known by today.

Waring's college career ended in his sophomore year when he and his band left Penn State to play theater and vaudeville houses.

In the mid-20's the group was much like the original 10 in that the members were still musicians who could clown and double as singers. Waring's number "Collegiate" put them into public light as "collegiate hot stuff."

In 1928 his group played in Paris, London and Berlin. The Glee Club and the band gained their initial success on a radio show which began in 1933.

Since then Waring and the Pennsylvanians have been touring the United States and Europe, giving concerts as well as presenting radio and television shows.

Extension Service

Bureau Of Audio Visual Instruction 'Least Noticed Yet Most Diversified'

By JULIE MARR
Staff Writer

One of the least noticed yet most diversified departments of the University's extension service is the bureau of audio visual instruction.

As simple as this department appears, it is a complex organization, which a tour through the basement of the Architectural building will show any interested student. One of the major parts of the audio visual department is the film library, containing 400 motion pictures, 400 2x2 slides, 900 film strips and 200 records. Along with this are the tapes for teaching, the play loan library and the University produced films. Another activity is the department's co-sponsorship of the Audubon Screen tours, the American Film Trilogy which will appear on campus.

Robert E. Stepp, supervisor of the audio visual department, explained the different subject areas contained in the film library. There are 200 subject areas for classroom instruction for the elementary schools as well as college and adult classes.

He noted that the agricultural subject field had 15 subject divisions. Besides these educational films, there are many adapted commercial films for class study, such as parts of "The Stratton Story" and "David Copperfield."

The audio visual department not only serves the University in supplying films and records to various classes and departments but supplies public schools throughout the state with educational films.

Gail Drahota, Sue Muehlaupt, Gretchen Winkler, Marymaude Bedford and Alison Faulkner will be put on the auction block. The queens will be willing to serve as dates, bus "girls", waitresses or they might put on a talent show.

Rev. Rex Knowles, Dean Frank Hallgren and Dr. Curtis M. Elliot, a few of the more well known, more permanent personalities on campus are willing to wash dishes, wait on tables and the like, again, for a price.

Someone with the right amount of cash may purchase Janet Lindquist, 1954 Hello Girl. Andy Loehr, the Ugliest Man on Campus, will be eligible for purchase and would provide a somewhat ugly date for some young lady.

Dentistry Adds New Equipment

A new course, equipment, color scheme and clinic are all parts of the College of Dentistry's expanded program.

During the summer, a classroom in the school was remodeled into a six-chair clinic, which makes possible additional services in the school's clinic.

The new course, a graduate course in orthodontics braces and straightening teeth, will be using this room. Green is the color of new equipment used in the clinic. Pastel green is considered to have a restful effect on the patient.

"The field of orthodontics has become so advanced that some phases have had to be deleted from undergraduate work because the student does not have the time to do them," Dr. Bert L. Hooper, dean of the College of Dentistry, said.

Included in graduate courses of that nature is the study of growth of children as well as instruction in the more complicated orthodontic problems, Dr. Hooper said.

Censure Amendment Asked

Senator Watkins, chairman of the special censure committee on Sen. Joseph McCarthy, has asked that the Senate censure McCarthy for his remarks about the committee as well as for the two counts on the committee's recommendations.

McCarthy called the six members of the committee "unwitting handmaidens of the Communists." He also called Watkins "a coward" and "stupid." Watkins, his voice ringing with emotion, said the censure resolutions now should be amended to cover McCarthy's recent remarks.

Watkins said that ever since his committee recommended censure it has been subjected to "guerilla warfare" by McCarthy and his journalist and radio commentator "satellites."

Tachen Islands Figure In Defense

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said that any moves by Red China to carry out its professed intention to conquer Formosa would involve hostilities with the United States.

Dulles also told a news conference that the Tachen Islands, where Chinese Reds sank a Nationalist China destroyer escort, could possibly be involved in the defense of Formosa. He did not say outright that the U.S. 7th Fleet should participate in the defense of the islands.

While the islands are 200 miles from Formosa, they embraced an early warning system which would detect air raids from the Red China mainland.

Blow Away That Smoke

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson has asked land grant colleges to help "blow away the smokescreen that farm income depends on Washington and that prices are made by bureaucrats."

In a speech for the 68th annual convention of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities, Benson spelled out four areas in which the land-grant colleges "have a special opportunity to enlarge your service to American agriculture."

They are: the farm unit approach, marketing, low-income farms and public policy.

Benson said that colleges "must not" become politically involved in farm policy. But he said "surely you can present information factually and you can explain objectively, the consequences of various courses of action in farm policies."

In 1937 he received an honorary doctor of agriculture degree from the University.

He was a fellow of the American-Scandinavian Foundation, University of Copenhagen, and the Royal Agricultural College of Denmark. Dr. Christensen did graduate work at Harvard in economics and business administration and served as executive secretary of the Federal Farm Board since 1929.
