Student Expresses Blockade Approval

By BEV DEEPE Staff Writer

The people, but not the rulers, of Red China would approve an American blockade of the China coastline, should the State Department decide to enforce one, a University student from China said. He made the statement following Secretary of State Dulles' statement suggesting possible retaliation for imprisonment of 13 Americans Wednesday.

ing something to thwart Communism. A blockade would act as a prelude to an all-out Nationalist counter-attack.

Strong Protest

A blockade will, however, encounter a strong protest from the Chinese Communist regime, the applicant for American citizenship brought out, in differentiating between the views of the people and the rulers of continental China. Whether or not a blockade would result in an Asiatic war depends on the present strength of the Reds and the amount of belligerent contact between American and Russian vessels.

Secretary of State Dulles said Wednesday the United States might blockade Red China if peaceful means fail to protect the rights of citizens like the 13 Americans jailed by Peking on spy charges. He said, however, that he was confident, but not certain, that peaceful means would be sufficient.

War or Release

Hsu believes a blockade would cause China either to release the 13 imprisoned American airmen or declare an all-out war. Whichever China chooses depends on the strength it feels it has in relation to other countries.

"Sooner or later, there will be a war over Formosa," Hsu said, although he did not indicate whether the United States would be a part of the conflict. "The Communists consider Formosa part of China, and feel that they must also conquer that territory."

Direct Answer

Morally, strategically and psychologically, a blockade would be "the direct answer" for the United States to Red China's motives in the prisoner problem, Hsu brought out. He added, "If I had more information, however, (such as that held by the State Department), I might feel different."

Such action by the United States would also produce worthwhile psychological effects by indicating "that the patience of the free-world peoples has come to an end," he said. Hsu indicated that whether the United States takes a step toward active blockading of the China coast probably depends on the information the State Department holds on the strength of the Reds and the present general foreign policy.

Film To Show Fossil Search Operations

"Search and Research: Hunting Animals of the Past," the fifth in a series of Great Plains Trilogy films, will be shown in Morrill Hall, Room 20 at 2:30 and 3:15 p.m. Sunday.

The film explains the operations of a fossil hunter, the research before the search for fossils and the further research on a discovery.

Dr. C. Bertrand Schultz, professor of paleontology and geology and Museum director, and Lloyd Tanner, assistant curator on vertebrate paleontology, will be featured in the film.

The Great Plains Trilogy was filmed by University television for the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters under a grant-in-aid from the Educational Television and Radio Center, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Ag Teams Win Honors For Judging

Two Ag College Judging teams, the crops team and the meats team, returned recently from judging contests in Chicago and Kansas City.

The crops judging team, composed of Bill Wieseler, Junior Knobel, Marvin Coffey and Charles Harris, placed third in the National Collegiate Crops Judging Contest at Kansas City Nov. 23.

The team then journeyed to Chicago where they competed in the International Contest, held in conjunction with the International Grain and Hay Show, Nov. 27. The team took fifth place honors.

Chase Allred is the team's coach. The meats judging team, coached by Charles Adams, placed 15th in the Intercollegiate meats Judging Contest held in Chicago Nov. 30. Earl Stalnaker, team member, placed second in lamb grading.

Victorious Warriors . . .

Hawaiians impressed the party very much. "The people are really nice," said Rex Fischer. "We will have to do a good job to show those kids a good time when they come down next year," he said. Don Comstock, who scored the first two Nebraska touchdowns, especially appreciated a party with all the Hawaiian trimmings given for the players by a group of Hawaiians. They were served everything from the ever-popular "poi" and baked bananas to a pig roasted whole by burying it in the ground in hot coals.

A Little Messy

"Everything was eaten with the hands," he said. Things got a little messy, but were mighty tasty. Poi, a pasty substance made from roots, was new and little strange to the Cornhuskers.

Hula dancers are abundant in the islands and are prominent fixtures for the arrival and departure of any airplane or ship bringing visitors to and from the Mainland. They are much in demand for entertainment for the tourist trade and are excellent sponsors for grass skirts anywhere.

Recommendation

Included on the Huskers itinerary was a game played between two Honolulu high schools. It was generally agreed that high school football in Hawaii pretty well measures up to that in the United States. Many Hawaiians close to Hawaiian football feel that the University of Hawaii football teams are hurt by the migration of local players to mainland schools.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday the team explored Honolulu and the surrounding area on their own, spending much of their time in the water in a welcomed freedom from the rigors of football drills.

The flight from Hawaii to Lincoln was only 14 hours. The party then trooped down the ladder from the plane, their necks piled high with orchid leis salvaged from their departure.

Perhaps the composite feeling of the team can be summed up from the words of a player who, as he absently emptied the sand from his shoes, said, "I'll recommend it to anyone."

YWCA Coeds 'Hang Greens' In Ellen Smith

A 15-foot high Christmas tree was decorated in Ellen Smith Hall court at the YWCA's annual "Hanging of the Greens" Wednesday evening.

Each of the other rooms was ornamented to represent a Christmas carol. The drawing room is "Jingle Bells," dining room, "White Christmas," Dean Snyder's office, "Silent Night," and Dean Johnston's office, "Little Town of Bethlehem."

A violin trio, Rosemary Weeks, Gail Katskee and Hannah Rosenberg, provided background music for the decorating party.

A short program followed with Norma Bossard singing "White Christmas" and Jody Chalupa reading "The Littlest Angel." The entire group sang "Deck the Halls," then had hot punch and Christmas cookies prepared by the YWCA Advisory Board.
