Film Forum

Seventh In Series Scheduled

Former Sen. Guy M. Gillette (D-Ia.) and Irving Ferman of the American Civil Liberties Union, will be featured in the film, "What About the Fifth Amendment?"

The film is the seventh in a series sponsored by the University and will be presented Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Love Library Auditorium.

After the film, Dr. Lane Lancaster, professor of political science, will act as moderator for a discussion which will include Dr. David Dow, acting dean of the College of Law and James N. Ackerman, Lincoln attorney.

The films are sponsored by the Union, the departments of history and political science and the Bureau of Audio-Visual Instruction.

Marquis Childs will act as moderator in the film presentation.

'Shoemaker's Holiday' Play Tryouts Set

Tryouts for "Shoemakers' Holiday" by Thomas Dekker will be Wednesday, and Thursday in Room 301, Temple. The play, which will be produced May 10 to 15, includes a cast of 22 men and four women. This last University production of the year will be directed by Dallas Williams.

Tryout times are Wednesday, 3 to 5 p.m.; Thursday, 3 to 5 p.m. and 7:30 to 10 p.m. Final tryouts will be Friday night.

The farce comedy has five leads: Rowland Lacy, Simon Eyre, Firk, Margery Eyre, and Rose Oatley. It is about Simon Eyre, a shoemaker who becomes the mayor of London.

The plot centers around the methods Simon Eyre uses to become the mayor of London. Most of the characters are hard-living, fast-talking, wine-drinking, joke-cracking shoemakers and other low life in London.

Summer Work

City Campus Religious Council Projects Mart Opens Today

The City Campus Religious Council will hold its Summer Projects Mart Tuesday from 2 to 5 p.m. in Union Room 315, according to Marvin Breslow, CCRC Mart chairman.

Familiarizing students with opportunities for taking part in various types of summer projects is the purpose of the Mart, Breslow said.

Representatives of campus religious groups and the YWCA will set up booths at the Mart where they will have available brochures and pamphlets explaining details of the projects. According to Motive, magazine of the Methodist Student Movement many Protestant denominations and youth organizations conduct several types of summer projects.

Among such projects are Caravans, groups of college students who in the summer travel between towns, aiding local churches in their youth programs. They are sponsored by the Methodist and Evangelical and Reformed Churches.

Several organizations sponsor camps in which college students donate their labor in helping to construct needed buildings for churches and social services. They are conducted both in the United States and abroad.

For example, the Youth Department of the World Council of Churches is sponsoring an ecumenical work camp in Berlin in July and August. Students will help unemployed German workers build homes for themselves.

Another kind of project is sponsored by the National Student Council of the YM-YWCA and other groups. Under one project, students will hold government jobs in Washington D.C.

Many organizations conduct international projects. The Lutheran Student Association, for example, will conduct a two-week project in June at Felton, Calif. In it, 35 American and foreign students, Christian and non-Christian, will consider the "Validity of Christian Faith" in relation to other answers to dilemma of modern man and society.

In other church-sponsored projects, students will work in hospitals, help in slum clearance and take part in programs trying to improve living conditions for Indians.

In Students-in-Industry projects, sponsored by the National Student Council of the YM-YWCA and the American Friends Service Committee, students may work in local industries, earning enough money to save a little living co-operatively and examining "the relevance of Christian faith to economic life."
