

'Tassels' Display U Spirit

Tassels is the pep organization of sophomore, junior and senior University women. Their University spirit and enthusiasm are on display at football and basketball games and on many other campus occasions.

The organization is made up of 60 women who are chosen from candidates attending the Tassel Tea in the Spring. Members wear uniforms showing Nebraska's scarlet and cream in their skirts, sweaters and tasseled hats.

Each organized women's house sends two candidates to the tea; one will be chosen a new Tassel. Unaffiliated women also become members by submitting an application and attending the tea.

Tassels is a local chapter of Phi Sigma Chi, a national women's pep organization. New Tassels spend their first year in the group as pledges, who work to earn a certain number of activity points required to be initiated.

A national convention of Phi Sigma Chi is held annually, and Tassels send representatives to report activities and progress and to exchange ideas.

Each year an outstanding Tassel active and pledge are selected. Both pledges and actives earn points by selling balloons, candy, and N-flowers during football season. They work with the Corncobs, men's pep group.

The direction of Homecoming activities is in the hands of the Tassels and Corncobs. They plan the parade, presentation of the queen and so on.

MANY NATIONALITIES are represented at the University. Here some foreign students join in a party featuring native costumes.

NUCWA Emphasizes World Current Events

NUCWA means Nebraska University's Conference on World Affairs. The organization is for students who are interested in and want to keep up with the current affairs of the world.

The club is organized with four levels of officers — president, three vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer. One of the vice-presidents is in charge of planning the program. Another is in charge of public relations, including faculty relations, foreign student relations, and intercollegiate relations. The last vice-president, in charge of management, co-ordinates membership, publicity, and display committees.

The program for NUCWA includes bi-weekly meetings, International Friendship Dinner, and the Spring Conference. The highlight of the year, though, is UN Week and the mock United Nations meeting, complete with Russian intrigues and fiery debates.

AWS Rules Enforced For Coeds

The task of enforcing the rules and regulations that necessarily govern women students living on the University campus lies with the Associated Women Students organization. As well as regulation of closing hours and quiet hours in dorms and houses, AWS also regulates the number of activities in which a coed may participate.

All women students living in the dormitories and organized houses are governed by AWS. When leaving the house or dorm after 6 p.m., it is necessary to "sign out," for the anticipated destination and the expected hour of return. Upon returning, it is necessary to "sign in" on this same sheet.

Closing hours are regulated by the AWS board. First semester women must be in the dorm by 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 12:30 p.m. on Friday night, 1 a.m. on Saturday night, and 10:30 on Sunday night. Violators of these hours are disciplined by the AWS court.

Quiet hours, required in order to provide a suitable atmosphere in which to study, must be observed by all residents of dorms and houses. These hours vary within the various houses and the dorm but are fundamentally the same.

This organization maintains a point system that limits the number of activities in which a coed may participate.

How cool can you get?

Nothing does it like Seven-Up!

Ag Union Provides Cokes, Companions At 'Cow College'

Activities and events for Ag College coeds and men are centered at the Ag Union, which is located in the College Activities Building.

The Ag Union is where Ag students gather for cokes and coffee, cards or checkers during their leisure hours.

Various events are sponsored by the Ag Union each year. One such event is the "Pot Luck With the Profs" dinner which is co-sponsored by members of the ag faculty. A dinner of this type is held every Sunday night so that ag students may get acquainted with each other and with the faculty.

Getting acquainted is even more easy if one becomes a member of an Ag Union Committee. The committees are general entertainment, house, dance and publicity.

These committees sponsor games and recreation, hour dances, dancing lessons, art and handicraft shops. Ag Sno-Ball Formal, Starlight Terrace Ball and publicity for all these events. A weekly news bulletin, the Ag Rag gives a run-down of all these ag events.

Most of the various departments on ag campus have organizations which further study in specific fields.

Block and Bridle is one of these organizations. This Club which is for students who are interested in animal husbandry, annually sponsors the Junior Ak-Sar-Ben livestock and horse show in the spring.

Tri-K, Klod and Kernel Club is for students who are interested in agronomy. It annually sponsors a crop judging and seed identification contest.

For dairying students, there is the Varsity Dairy Club, which holds dairy judging contests each spring.

Ag economics students who wish to further their knowledge along that line may belong to the Ag Economics Club which sponsors meetings with lectures by leading economists at the University.

For future agriculture teachers, there is the Vocational Agriculture Club, which has as one of its many activities, the sponsorship of contests for high school FFA students.

Home Economics Club, the largest departmental club on ag campus, is open to all home ec students. It holds weekly meetings with discussions and talks on improvement in home economics and also presents a style show each spring.

For those who like square dancing, Ag Country Dancers sponsor an All-University square dance every month.

The University 4-H Club is for students who were previously 4-H members and wish to continue in 4-H work.

All of these organizations work together in the spring to hold Farmers Fair, which includes a Cotton and Denim Dance, a parade, rodeo and barbecue.

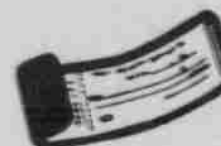

Other ag activities include the Coll-Agri-Fun show, a presentation of skits and curtain acts by ag organizations, and the Farmers Formal, first dance in the fall.

The Farmers Formal is sponsored by the Ag Executive Board, student governing body of Ag College. The Ag Executive Board also sponsors a traditional Christmas program.
