Husker Gridders Journey To Ohio State

It was established that Nebraska gridders still support their head coach Bill Glassford and his staff this week. Following Saturday's upset an air of uncertainty had drifted around but the Huskers seem to have only one thought on their mind. That of giving Ohio State a real battle.

Husker lineups have been shifted many times this week for the purpose of awarding fine play Saturday and instilling more spirit in the Cornhusker camp. Glassford announced that "There will be no wholesale changes, but we will try to get strength at certain spots." Ohio State is reported to work off of a straight-T formation with a little split-T thrown in.

"We are working defensively against what we think will be the strong points of their attack," Glassford stated. He failed to name these strong points but added that the Buckeyes have "fine backs in Howard (Hopalong) Cassidy, Doc Vico and Jerry Harkrader.

The only scouting report the Huskers can work off of is last year's Michigan and Illinois games as this is the Ohio State opening game.

It was indicated after Thursday's workout that some Nebraska players will see extensive action at Columbus tomorrow. Glassford declined naming which individuals would be taking the brunt of the battle.

One thing in the Cornhusker's favor is the fact that they are still injury free and should go into the Ohio State game at full strength.

In IM Play: Grid List Deadline Up Today

By ED KEMBLE
Intramural Editor

The deadline for entries in the intramural football leagues is 5 p.m. today. I.M. managers who intend to enter a team and have not yet done so, should submit their teams' names to intramural director Ed Higgenbotham before that time.

Football rosters need not be turned in until the time of the first game. The entry fee of $10, not necessary at the time of entry, must be in before the first game.

Concerning eligibility, it was stated in Tuesday's NEBRASKAN that all football letter award winners from other colleges and universities are ineligible for I.M. competition. This rule has been so altered that it now states that varsity lettermen from other institutions of Big Seven Conference rank or their equivalent shall be barred from intramural competition in the sport in which they lettered. Thus transfers from such institutions as junior colleges, state colleges, and municipal colleges shall be considered eligible as far as the previous letter rule is concerned. For final clarification in individual cases, Mr. Higgenbotham should be consulted.

Fall tennis singles and golf entry dates also fall due this weekend. The tennis entries must be in by noon Saturday at the intramural office, Room 102. Golf entries will be taken at Pioneer Park Golf Course between 7 and 8 a.m. either Saturday or Sunday at which time a qualifying round of 18 holes will be shot.

All men who are on a grant-in-aid scholarship of any form are to report to the East Stadium Thursday, Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. This is a very important meeting and all concerned are requested to be there. Athletic Director Bill Orwig announced.

Sports Shorts

As football machines around the country begin to grind through their rugged ten game schedules there comes a time when the sports writers stick their necks out and predict the season's outcome. In view of last Saturday's bewildering upset one who is prone to predict may not always have the facts in his crystal ball. So, at this point we will make one more journey to the guillotine and volunteer my neck to the stockpile of decapitated journalists.

In spite of the perennial question "who is going to beat Oklahoma?" the Big Seven seems to have more good teams this season than in several years. Just one factor puts a damper on this; the Conference elevens also face the roughest schedules in many a campaign. All of the Big Seven teams face squads of national prominence and for "breathers" will have to battle themselves.

Sooners Try For Eight

This seems to have the markings of a run of the mill year for the Big Seven. Oklahoma's Sooners are gunning for their eighth straight capture of loop laurels. The Sooners have dominated the top rung for so long the conference officials had to put in a stipulation that no team could participate in post-season bowl games two years in a row. It seems the boys from Norman were wearing out their welcome.

But our Huskers slid into an Orange Bowl bid last season by virtue of their runner-up position, thus allowing the Sooners eligibility this year. The top nomination to bump off the Oklahomans goes to a veteran Colorado outfit who in spite of losing several of their outstanding backs via diploma seems to have adequate manpower to fit the situation.

Oklahoma doesn't seem to look overripe for an upsetting however, with their starting line intact except for the ends. The Sooners supposedly have ample replacements and will be strongest in the middle. Coach Bud Wilkinson claims to have the best back in quite a spell in the person of Jim Harris, quarterback. The word is out that he is expected to amass over 800 yards personally with the split-T option play.

The Buffalo line is three-deep in efficient gridders and seems imposing enough with power that their offense may surpass that of last year's, even without stars Carroll Hardy and Frank Bernardi. John Bayuk will power the backfield from his fullback slot and is a cinch for All-Regional honors.

Missouri appeared somewhat green and suffering from lack of depth. But their near disaster of powerful Maryland has changed many outlooks. Their only regular back returning has been shifted from halfback to quarter and seems to be running smoothly.

Spirit High At K-State

Kansas State, although not seeming to fit into the classification of the above three teams, is laden with numeral winners. With 20 lettermen returning and a new coach, the Wildcats figure to be rugged. Bus Mertes has replaced Bill Meek at the K-State helm.

Untested, untried, and unranked sums up the Iowa State aggregation. Fifty-five sophomores are among the aspirants for starting berths.

Kansas seems to have hit the drought. The Jayhawks have a string of losses comparable to Oklahoma's win skein. The narrowest margin of defeat last year was 18 points so the Sunflowers will have to improve 18 or more points a game for even a tie.
