

Nebraskan Editorials:

Tomorrow Is Another Day

Perhaps tomorrow will be different. Perhaps we'll see a good football game. Perhaps we'll see two team playing their hearts out.

Nebraska beat K-State, 16-0. But everyone said the Wildcats were weak this year. Tomorrow we play a fine team, one of the powers in the Southwest-Texas A&M.

Let's Go South

Perhaps another University tradition has bit the dust of ignominy—the victim of petty bickering and involved red tape. And it is readily admitted that the University has few enough traditions.

to Ames, but if women were to go to Columbia, it would count as a regular overnight. Under the recently tightened rules, a trip to Missouri would rule out attendance at many of the University's traditional social events.

France Flings Dictatorial Tactics

The enigma that is French domestic politics has descended on the United Nations like a dead hand. Angered by the decision of the General Assembly to discuss the problem of Algerian nationalism, Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay led the French delegation in a walk-out as dramatic as that staged by the Russians five years ago.

pleading "domestic question" France had been able, until Friday, to prevent a public airing of her colonial rule. In actuality, and according to accepted usage of the terms, France is correct in assuming Algeria to be a domestic problem.

A migration to Missouri was on the calendar of many University students and was regarded with the same amount of anticipation as those dates proclaiming Thanksgiving and Christmas recesses. Most students believed, as is regularly believed, that each year the migration is to Missouri or Colorado, depending upon which game was away from home.

In other words, AWS decided that they would be the sponsors of an official, unofficial migration this year and tell the women where they could go, and in effect, where they could not go.

Behind The Eightball: The Story Of My Life Or, 'As Time Goes By'

By Clyde Vatt, Guest Columnist. I imagine that some day I shall be referred to as the late Mr. Vatt. My reputation for habitually being unpunctual is quite spotless. In fact, right offhand, the only time I can remember coming close to being on time was my last year in high school at the commencement exercises—but then I forgot my tassel and had to go back after it anyway.

Under The Crib

For well over two hundred years now American newspapers have been free. All papers—as far apart as The New York Times, The Chicago Tribune, The Daily Worker, The Post-Dispatch, yes and even The Rag—they've all had complete freedom to say what they thought was true.

ing in the local press saying the city is filing charges against a distributor of magazines for selling what "some certain party" in the city feels is the wrong type of literature. The issue here, the real crucial issue, goes far beyond the local businessman, the magazine publisher, the citizen bringing the complaint and even the city's legal officers who have initiated court action.

Quick Quips

The green between them was as soft as swan's down... closer and closer they came... one a blushing red... the other a pale white... closer over the parapet of green they came... they met... an instant later they kissed... then, dam the luck, a little more English on the red ball and it would have been a billiards.
