Engineers Rank Second In Nation-Wide Survey
5.66 Per Cent Recognized As Outstanding

A recent study of college backgrounds reveals that the University College of Engineering and Architecture ranks second of all schools in the nation in the percentage of graduates who are recognized as outstanding engineers.
Of the 3,282 students who graduated from the College, 5.66 per cent are listed in the present edition of "Who's Who in Engineering," according to Dr. Charles Baer of the University of Kansas School of Engineering and Architecture, who conducted the study.
Dartmouth University leads the field of 475 colleges with a percentage of 6.62. Other schools in the midwest which rank high are: Kansas, 4th; Missouri, 5th; South Dakota State, 9th; Missouri Mines, 10th; and Iowa, 15th. Massachusetts Institute of Technology ranked 18th.
In total number of college alumni listed, Nebraska tied with Kansas State for 22nd and 23rd place, with 186 entries each.
Roy Green, dean of the University's College of Engineering and Architecture, said this high rating emphasized two points: "The College's sound judgment in course material; and the adaptability of Nebraska students."
He said it has been a long-established fact that boys off the midwestern farms tend to develop into outstanding engineers. "The reason," he said, "is their willingness to accept responsibility. Farm life, with its responsibilities for every member of the family, develops desirable characteristics in the boys from an early age."
The only handicap experienced by farm boys, he said, is the "development of smooth liaison with larger groups." But, he added, this can be learned.
Dean Green believes that if a student hasn't learned to take responsibility by the time he is in his middle 20's, he never will acquire the trait.
In the college program, Dean Green said every effort is made to strengthen this ability of accepting responsibility, "which is the biggest factor in becoming an outstanding engineer."
"Engineering students are urged to use their own ingenuity. An example of this is the College's student magazine, "The Blueprint," for which the students have complete responsibility, both financially and editorially. This year the magazine was adjudged the best written student engineering magazine of all the schools in the nation."
Chancellor Clifford Hardin called the rating "a tribute to the excellent program carried on by the faculty of the College and to the quality of Nebraska graduates. There are few tangible measuring sticks of teaching, and this rating points up what I have been saying for many months, Nebraska has one of the finest Colleges of Engineering and Architecture in the nation, and every Nebraskan should be proud of this."

Season Opener: "Stalag 17" Comedy Presented With Polish

By DON and BILL WALTON Staff Writers
University Theatre's 1955-56 season opened Tuesday night on a spirited note, bringing to the Howell Stage Donald Bevan's and Edmund Trzcinski's "Stalag 17." The excellent production, characterized by polished performances and swift pacing, thrilled a large audience.
The play might be termed comedy for not only is its low comedy funny, but "Stalag 17" borders on the tragic.
Once first act jitters were overcome, the play raced to a tension-packed final scene. Much of the early difficulty may be attributed to the actors' failure to grasp their audience until after the second act curtain.
The plot is built around the presence of an informer among some American prisoners in a German camp during World War II. One man is openly accused, but several others are not beyond suspicion. Rip Peyroux, Skip Weatherford,

'Galloping Poll' Shows Favorite

A galloping poll on the cigarette preferences of University women, conducted by Theta Xi pledges after they returned from their sneak, has shown that coeds choose "the cigarette with 20,000 filters" two to one over its nearest competitor.
The yield of 1118 lipstick-stained remains, collected Sunday evenings from various organized houses, carefully sorted, counted, and tabulated, shows that filter tips of all kinds lead the field, comprising nearly 50 per cent of the total.
A new trend in smoking is indicated by the accumulation of six cigar butts in the debris. It is probable that these were the remains of pinnings. This poll is expected to add to the general worldly knowledge which is necessary to liberal education, it was carried on in the best interests of scientific discovery, Jim Flacke, Theta Xi pledge trainer, said.
If the active members of the Theta Xi chapter think it necessary a similar survey may be conducted later, showing the preferences among fraternity men, he said.

A college professor bemoans the fact that modern coeds are not interested in knowledge in the Theta Xi's skit "Tamed by the Shrews." Later the prof finds himself back in the 17th Century surrounded by shrews. Wendell Friest is skitmaster.
John Forsyth and Ed Schmitt are skitmasters of the Phi Gamma Delta's skit "Fleet Smellies Boose." The story tells of the birth of the blues on the University campus.
"King Arthur in Bulgarian's Court" is the name of the Phi Delta Theta skit with Warren Burt as skitmaster. Things are done a little differently in a modern kingdom than in the days of knight-hood, King Arthur discovers.
A trumpet-playing granny is featured in Delta Tau Delta's skit "Red Riding Hood's Square Granny." Fred Allen is skitmaster. Until the big bad wolf comes along, Granny plays a mean trumpet in the weekly jam sessions.
The setting of the Sigma Phi Epsilon skit is the old University of Heidelberg. The skitmaster of the "Stewed Prince" is John Kyser. The pledging of the Stewed Prince during rush week proves to be a trying experience.

A bill of responsibilities to go along with the bill of rights in America's fight on Communism was advocated by Adm. Arthur Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.
In a speech prepared for the National Conference on Spiritual Foundations, Radford declared that "teaching a person to recite the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights by memory . . . is not enough." He added that teaching a person the meaning of liberty is much more important. "It is obvious," he said, "the Communists have made amazing gains, largely because they know what they believe, why they believe it, and can explain it."
