

CU Invades Husker Homecoming

Husker Lineup Riddled Seriously By Injuries

CU Depth Big Factor

By WALT BLORE
Staff Sports Writer

If Bill Glassford can produce a winning combination against Colorado Saturday, Nov. 12 he will have come up with the best coaching job of the year—better than Ohio State even if "Bear" Bryant doesn't think so.

Nebraska, who has had depth problems all year, is confronted with finding 11 men who can fill the positions necessary to have a working football unit.

The Big Red will be weak in the middle of the line and at the fullback position. Guard Jim Murphy is still out and Jerry Brown, who was shifted into the line from fullback, will probably be needed at his old slot. Regular fullbacks John Edwards and George Cifra are bothered by groin injuries. The next in line, Gene Haman, sprained his ankle a week ago and has not rounded back into combat ready shape. Harry Johnson, who normally runs as Willie Greenaw's understudy at right fullback, was given a crack at fullback in Wednesday's scrimmage. But, Johnson came up with a bruised hip after the rough stuff, and unless he heals quickly he may not be ready for the Buffalo encounter.

Colorado, on the other hand, comes to Lincoln with more depth than any team the Cornhuskers have met this season. Although first string tailback Homer Jenkins is out with a bum knee he is replaced by an able sophomore in the person of Don Stransky. Stransky was South Dakota high school hurdle champ. An exceptionally good runner and passer, he wears No. 20 and tips the Fairbanks-Morse at 180. John "The Beast" Bayuk and Jack Becker are the demons that deliver the one-two punch at fullback. Bayuk lead the Big Seven Conference in total rushing yardage as a sophomore in 1954. At wingback is veteran Emerson Wilson. Wilson was starting fullback against the Huskers last year. But, Buff coach Dal Ward figured that Wilson could fill the right half spot and still not leave any deficiency at fullback. At quarterback or backing back in the single wing formation is Dick Hyson, a 205 sophomore. Hyson serves as one end on Colorado's passing attack. His favorite target is Frank Clarke, a junior transfer student from Trinidad Junior College. Clarke weighs 210 pounds and has tremendous speed and big hands which make him one of the top pass catchers in the Big Seven.

JOHN EDWARDS... number one fullback may see limited action only due to a groin injury suffered at lowa State. All three Husker fullbacks are listed on the "may not play" list for Saturday.

BOB STRANSKY... Buff half-back may be the thorn in the side of the Huskers as he will replace the injured Homer Jenkins in the starting lineup.

The Colorado Buffaloes, the current Homecoming invaders, will be blessed with more depth than any other team the Huskers will play this year, with the exception of Oklahoma.

At halfback, replacing the injured Homer Jenkins, Coach Dallas Ward can put in Don Stransky, speedy 180-pound sophomore who was the South Dakota high and low hurdles champion.

At fullback the Buffs will offer John (The Beast) Bayuk, a 205-pound projectile who led the Big Seven in rushing last year with 824 yards. He is said to be even better this year.

Behind Bayuk is stampeding sophomore named Jack Becker, a lad weighing in at 200-pounds who ran for 109 yards against Utah last week.

As a passer Ward has a tall sophomore, Dick Hyson, who has completed 10 of 19 passes this year for 282 yards. His best target is End Frank Clarke who has snagged 11 losses this season for 425 yards. Against Utah he caught only two, but they were good for 100 yards and two touchdowns.

Defensive stalwart for Colorado is Center Don Karnoscak, a 200-pound senior. His defensive play brought them out of a two-game losing streak as they thumped Utah last week.

REX FISCHER... senior halfback will captain Huskers against Colorado Saturday as the Nebraskans continue their quest for an undefeated conference record. Fischer is currently ranked eighteenth in the nation on total yardage rushing.

Sooners Hold Big Seven Lead

By BOB COOK
Sports Editor

Many scribes have had a tendency lately to refer to the Big Seven Conference as the Little Six, due to the methodical performance of Bud Wilkinson Sooners who have racked up a significant 51 game skein in loop play. Superficially, this may give reason for the references as the Oklahomans definitely have monopolized the Conference Grid Crown since the forming of the present Big Seven.

Granted football may be the spectacle that draws the spectators, but most conference members support nine other athletic squads in their programs. The Sooners performances here are also highly creditable, but it is of a keener competitive nature. For instance Missouri actually nosed out the Oklahomans for top billing in major sports last season. Awarding points in a basis of the positions relative to the four major sports; football, basketball, track and baseball the Tigers edged out the Sooners for the top rung. While Missouri didn't snare a championship last season their steady showing kept them in the number one slot.

In an overall picture for last year, the men from O.U. move onto the apex of the loop when minor sports are figured in to the standings. The Sooners mauled minor sport participants in Big Seven play as they won the swimming, wrestling, tennis and golf crowns.

Last season seemed to be the best in the annals of Soonerdom. Here is a chart depicting the showings of the conference members last year.

On the Husker side of the optimistic view there is one bit of cheering news. End Leroy Butherus, out with a mangled hand since the Pitt game, has been pronounced ready for Saturday's contest.

An animated model of a sodium-graphite atomic reactor plant, the type planned to be constructed by Consumers Public Power district in Nebraska, will be displayed for the first time in the state at the Nuclear Energy Institute at the University.

The Institute will be held Dec. 1 and 2 at the Union.

Chancellor Clifford Hardin said the model will be displayed by the North American Aviation Company. The model which cost approximately $16,000 was constructed especially for showing at the recent International Atomic Energy Conference held at Geneva, Switzerland.

Chancellor Hardin said that other displays to be shown at the Institute include:

A belt-type system of irradiating food, erected by General Electric Company.

Samples of irradiated food, a display sponsored by the Food and Container division of the U. S. Quartermaster Corps.
