Donor Of Exhibit:

Alumnus Mueller Given Honorary Curator Title

Ralph Mueller, Cleveland, Ohio, businessman and University alumnus, was named honorary curator of the University's Health Science Museum at Morrill Hall, Wednesday night.

He was presented the citation by Chancellor Clifford Hardin at the opening of the "Able to Live Again" exhibit at the museum.

The exhibit, on loan from the Cleveland Health Museum, was financed by a $2000 gift from Mueller through the University Foundation.

Mueller's citation for distinguished service stated:

"The University is deeply indebted to Ralph Mueller for his continuing and devoted interest in the establishment and development of the Health Galleries which bear his name."

It stated that the title of Honorary Curator of Health Sciences was conferred by the University "in recognition of this devotion to his alma mater and to the cause of public education."

Mueller previously provided the and the Carillon Tower. The east funds for the two Galleries of Health at the University Museum gallery which opened in 1952 depicts the story of growth. The west gallery opened in 1954 holds medical, dental and pharmaceutical displays.

The "Able to Live Again" exhibit will be open at the museum until the end of March.

It is being presented by the Lancaster County Medical Society, Mayor's Committee on the Employment of Handicapped, Nebraska Department of Rehabilitation Services, Nebraska Physical Therapy Association and the Sunday Journal and Star. (See Picture on Page 4).

Proposal: Ag Ec Club Offers Answer To Surplus

The student members of the University Agricultural Economics Club have a program of their own to offer as a solution to the farm surplus problem.

"We drew up these recommendations because we felt that a sound farm program is vital to our national economy," Mel Belling, president of the club, said.

Belling said that the group was in favor of the controversial soil bank plan, but they do not believe it will result in decreased food production as it is intended to do.

As outlined by President Eisenhower, the new proposal would take 40 million acres of farm land out of production to cut down on crop surpluses.

Club members feel that increased food production is a good thing and will help win world peace, provided the food can be distributed properly.

They propose establishing a world food bank under the United Nations. The food bank could provide storage for surplus foods and distribute it to needy countries for use in relieving famines and supporting educational and other new development programs.

The food would contribute to world economic stability without disrupting world trade. A United Nations committee would determine when and what to buy and sell by economic analysis of the country involved.

The group suggests undertaking the following distribution programs.

The food would contribute to world economic stability without disrupting world trade. A United Nations committee would determine when and what to buy and sell by economic analysis of the country involved.

The group suggests undertaking the following programs in the United States: an expanded school lunch program, increased food and clothing assistance to Indian reservation; increased factory hot lunch programs; food allotments to supplement old age assistance; and new uses for farm products through further research.

They favor an expanded national highway program, and other programs that stimulate national economy. Club members believe these programs will maintain a high demand for food and also provide employment for farmers leaving the agricultural field.

Flexible farm prices at 80 to 110 of parity are favored as a means of giving the farmer a fair share of the national income.

Belling added that these ideas will be discussed still further in future meetings, and that letters have been received from Sen. Carl Curtis and Rep. Robert Harrison and Rep. A. L. Miller expressing interest in the proposals.

Contest: Sno-Ball To Feature Baby Quiz

Baby pictures of 14 girls and 15 boys are on display in the showcase in the lobby of the Ag Union. All of these pictures are of students now attending college, and one of them will be presented as the "cutest baby" at the Sno-Ball dance Saturday night.

The winner of the "cutest baby" award will be selected by the votes of the students attending the dance. Brock Dutton was last year's lucky "baby."

Presentation of the "best guesser" award will also take place at the dance. Any undergraduate student is qualified to enter the competition. Clues concerning the identity of the baby pictures are posted in the Ag Union lobby.

Deadline for this part of the contest is Saturday noon.

Library Receives Piano As Memorial

Miss Charlotte Ward of Urbana, Ill., has given as a memorial to her mother, a former music instructor at the University, a grand piano for use in Love Library auditorium.

The gift was given through the University Foundation.

Her mother, the former Harriet Blair, taught voice at the University in 1893, and her father, Henry Ward, was head of the department of zoology for several years.

Closed Circuit Programs: Learning By Television Considered For Future

By ARLENE HRBEK Staff Writer

Increasing student enrollment may result in more than a changed campus profile, according to Dr. Adam Breckenridge, dean of faculties. It may result in a wholly different type of instruction.

The University is planning an ambitious building program to take care of physical accommodations for the increase, but no building program can guarantee enough new professors to teach in these buildings.

Closed circuit television is being discussed as a possible solution, Breckenridge indicated in an interview with The Nebraskan.

Chancellor Clifford Hardin; Jack McBride, University television director; Bob Slater, assistant director of KUON-TV, and Breckenridge have been studying the results of experiments conducted at Pennsylvania State University and Michigan State. The results of their closed circuit projects are being studied by the American Council of Education in Washington D.C.

Another college already using closed circuit TV is Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., where 800 freshman girls hear the same 20-minute lecture, given by a guest "master teacher," in 50 scattered classrooms.

Closed circuit TV operates on the principle of bringing the mountain to Mohamet. A program is telecast from the professor's lecture room and received in rooms on campus that have been placed on the network.

The "closed" of closed circuit programs means only the television sets that are hooked up to the campus network can receive the programs.

The question of whether such lectures would take care of both attentive and laggardly students can only be answered through practical experiments such as several colleges and universities are conducting.

McBride and Slater indicated that they have been "thinking it out" with the administration and information is being studied.

Nineteen Posts: Filings For AWS Board Positions Announced

Paula Broady Wells, AWS President, has announced that filings are open for the 1956-57 AWS Board.

The Associated Women Students Board includes seven sophomore members, seven junior members, and five senior representatives in addition to the president and vice-president.

Mrs. Wells stated that the candidates for these positions will be chosen following an interview of each girl and thorough consideration of individual leadership qualities, interest, personal standards and sincerity.

To be eligible for membership on AWS board, a candidate must meet the eligibility requirements for participation in extracurricular activities as set up by the University. She must be a bona fide member of the class which she proposes to represent.

A candidate must have a weighted scholastic average of at least 5.7. Members of AWS will be asked to resign if their weighted average drops below 5.7.

Students who are eligible and are interested in AWS Board membership may file in Rosa Bouton Hall this week at 5 p.m.

In urging women to file for AWS positions, Mrs. Wells stated, "Effective student government can only be achieved through sincere student interest."

The next year will bring many new problems to the University, and the women on campus will no doubt be asked to contribute their ideas toward the solution, she added.
