Ataturk Invites Hardin To Visit

Chancellor Clifford Hardin has been extended an invitation to visit Ataturk University in Turkey. The invitation was issued by Dr. Mar-

Nebraska's contract with ICA provides that the state land-grant school (the University) provide aid and assistance as necessary to the Turkish project. Several Turkish professors came to the University under the plan for the faculty instruction program.

If Hardin accepts the invitation, he will travel to Turkey sometime in the early spring. Hardin has not yet released his plans, but an answer will be forthcoming soon, according to administrative sources.

Baker reported that he had never seen a country so eager to improve education facilities. "Turkey has improved tremendously in social and economic aspects," he said.

The project has made considerable progress since it was started last April, he said. The project is being directed by the University mission with funds from the Turkish government and the ICA.

Fanfan, The Tulip:

Film Society Movie To Star Lollobrigida

Gina Lollobrigida and Gerald Philipe will star in the first presentation of the Fifth Annual Film Society film, "Fanfan, The Tulip." The movie will be shown Wednesday at 7:30 at the Capitol Theater. Only season ticket holders will be admitted.

This movie is about a French hero who lived during the reign of King Louis XIV. The story begins when a recruiting sergeant, goes to Normandy in search of young men to serve in the royal army.

Adeline, dressed as a gypsy, tells a likely prospect named Fanfan that he will become a great soldier, live a long, glorious life, and someday marry the king's daughter.

After narrowly escaping marriage to a peasant girl, Fanfan performs many outstanding feats of heroism. He decided to make love to the princess but was caught inside the castle and sentenced to death by the king. Adeline, realizing that she was in love with Fanfan, pleads successfully with the king and secures Fanfan's release.

Season tickets are now on sale in the Union or may be obtained from house representatives. Student tickets are $2.50 for a cost of 36 cents a film for the students.

Single tickets cannot be sold because of federal laws and film contracts. There will be no reduction for tickets bought after the first performance, according to Judy Kaplan, Union Activities Director.

"Students will therefore find it to their advantage to buy tickets now and get in on all the productions," she added. It is a policy of the Society, as a non-profit organization, to present a bonus film to members at the end of the series if the response, has made it financially possible. Marion Wright, ticket chairman, said that if the response continues as it has, there is a chance that a bonus film could be shown this year. Other movies included in the series:

"Conquest of Everest", Feb. 29. This is the story of the initial climb of Mount Everest by Sir Edmund Hillary and his guide, Tensing. Filmed in color on the spot, Hillary and Tensing do the actual speaking in the film.

"Ugetsu", March 7. This, the first Japanese film to be presented by the Film Society, was the winner of the Venice Film Festival Grand Prize. It is the story of four peasants, their dreams, their emotions and their frailties.

"Mr. Hulot's Holiday", March 21. Jacques Tati portrays Mr. Hulot, a modern-day Don Quixote, during his summer vacation at a seaside resort.

"Devil in the Flesh", a French film was rated by the National Board of Review as "exceptional and especially worth seeing."

Puccini's 'La Boheme' Involves Struggle Of Bohemian Artists

Tickets for the University Theater production of Puccini's "La Boheme" are still available in the theater ticket office, according to theater officials.

The plot of the four-act opera is centered around the struggle of four artists to make a living at art in a garret in Paris' Latin Quarter.

The first scene shows Rodolfo and Marcello, two of the four Bohemians sharing the apartment, on Christmas Eve. Rodolfo has just burned the manuscript of his play to keep warm. The philosopher Colline and the musician Suchanard, the other two Bohemians, join Rodolfo and the painter Marcello.

Marcello, Colline and Suchanard leave to celebrate the sale of one of Marcello's paintings and Rodolfo remains behind to write.

He is surprised by a young neighbor, Mimi, who has come to borrow a light for her candle. Rodolfo, unnerved, lets his candle go out and they search in the darkness for Mimi's candle.

While they are searching, their hands meet and they exchange confidences and declarations of love. Rodolfo sings one of the opera's most famous arias, "The Little Hand Is Frozen" to Mimi.

The second act takes place in the gay cafe, where Rodolfo and Mimi have joined the others. Marcello's mercenary and fickle sweetheart, Musetta, tries to regain his affection despite the presence of Alcindoro, her rich suitor.

Musetta interrupts the gaiety to inform them that Mimi is gravely ill without the strength to climb the stairs. Rodolfo carries Mimi to the garret, and the friends sacrifice their belongings to buy her medicine.

Mimi sings a last aria reminding Rodolfo of their happy days together and dies. Rodolfo cries her name in despair as the opera ends.

A double cast will present "La Boheme" Tuesday through Feb. 18 in Howell Memorial Theater. Max Whittaker, assistant professor of speech, will direct the production.

Convocation: Frye Talks On Basis Of Poetry

The language of poetry is very suggestive of mental disorder, Professor Northrop Frye told those attending the convocation Friday night at Love Library auditorium.

Frye, literary scholar and critic from Victoria College, University of Toronto, Canada, explained that this is because poetry is abstract literature based on metaphor.

The metaphor, he said, is a statement of identity such as "the hero is a lion." He reminded his audience that Shakespeare speaks of "the lunatic, the lover and the poet."

"Poetry," Frye said, "is different from other structures in words because this statement of identity could be made only by a lunatic, a lover or a poet."

One of the places where the metaphor can be seen at work is in the language of religion, he said. He used the term sun god as an illustration by which man identifies the sun with a god.

Frye, a student of modern psychology and author of papers dealing with aesthetic theory and poetic technique, visited the campus under the sponsorship of the Convocations Committee in conjunction with the department of English.

Al-Sherif Drops Suit Against NU

Mohamed Ben Al-Sherif, exchange student from Egypt, has decided to drop his suit against Alfred Calvert, resident advisor of Selleck Quad, and to withdraw from the University.

Along with this the University has also dropped its complaint against Al-Sherif for disturbing the peace.

Al-Sherif was arrested on Jan. 22 and charged with disturbing the peace in a University housing area. Al-Sherif has denied this charge.

Calvert was named the defendant in a $1000 suit filed in District Court stating that he rushed and shoved Mohamed and caused him mental injury by causing him to miss his final exams at the University.

An agreement on both these cases was reached out of court and Al-Sherif has said that he now plans to enroll at the University of Michigan.

In the fourth act, Rodolfo and
