Nebraskan Editorials:

Spiritual Stimulation

Religion at the University is largely a thing of indifference. Students are much too concerned with their busy daily schedules to be much involved in the work of the Church on the campus-and this, in itself, is not necessarily wrong or evil.

A student can produce an effective witness while in the classroom or in the Crib. His identification with the Church can be traced through his everyday actions.

Religious Emphasis Week does not have as its main purpose the addition of masses of students to the rosters of the religious organizations of the campus. It does have as its purpose the goal of preng every student and faculty member the realities of moral living and religious

Religious Emphasis Week may awaken dormant faiths and arouse hidden beliefsand it may stiumlate a few of those persons who were previously numbered with the ranks of the indifferent.

Three religions and nine speakers of national reputation are participating in the week's program providing leadership, but how many students will be interested is still an unknown factor. Contact of every student is the minimum standard which has been set by campus religious

But, the result of Religious Emphasis-Week will not be tabulated in totals stating the increase in church attendance, but it may be found in a tolerance and respect for the person of religious conviction. The success of Religious Emphasis week might be discovered not so much in the acceptance of dogma and doctrine as in the stimulation of honest doubt and intense questioning.

The first week of spiritual emphasis in three years is not designed to convert half the student population of the University from their erring Religious Emphasis Week is about what its very name implies-it is an emphasis on the fact that there is religion on the campus-and that is God.

Religious Emphasis Week is underlining and capitalizing the statement, "God Has A Place on Campus,"-S.J.

A Fair Warning

Office, warning students not to patronize the Mallard Club dance, is not as harmless as it might appear to be at face value.

Most likely, the much publicized note will have little practical effect specifically on Friday evening's party (even though, unofficial sources say, many people have been "scared out" by the proclamation), but it nonetheless establishes generally the attitude of the administration toward the future enforcement of drinking vio-

The "out-of-bounds" regulations imposed upon King's for the weekend will be exceedingly difficult to enforce. First, the administration doesn't have the police resources to raid the dance hall, and to summon the city or state police would be an unethical and extremely dangerous thing to be doing.

Secondly, it would be unwise and quite unpolitic for the University to assume the cloak of the Pinkerton and go out looking for violators.

But the important point to the letter, however, is that the administration has taken cognizance explicitly of the circumvention of University drinking regulations in the case of the Mallard Club dance, and implicitly of the cir- students and organized houses on the campus. cumvention in the instance of the many un-

The official notice from the Student Affairs scheduled, off-campus house parties in the past. It is common knowledge that the Mallard Club dance will be attended by University students. It has also been commonly known for some time that many organized groups have been holding many illegal, off-campus parties.

> But the fact that the University has tacitly recognized this situation in their statement does not mean that it will go out looking for violators. Instead, and almost more important, the administrative stand means that any violators which are reported, any complaints that are received, any evidence which turns up - concerning either individual or group infringementswill be disposed of severely, possible in expulsion for individuals and suspension for organized groups.

> Last Spring one fraternity house came within a hair breadth's of losing its charter. And it is not unlikely, if such incriminating evidence were again to come to the attention of the administration, for them to prosecute the guilty parties to the fullest.

> The message of last week was intended as fair warning to the University community.

> As such, it should be taken seriously by all

A Duty Still Unfulfilled

The University basketball team has played a ago. total of 21 games so far this year. About half north side of the campus. It will hold nearly other activities for their members. 10,000 fans.

It looks like no one told the Corn Cobs or the Tassels about these games, however.

Unofficial tabulations at the last two home Indicate 22 Tassels and eight Cobs present at the Kansas game, and 12 Tassels and ten Cobs at the Oklahome game,

At each game there were two cheerleaders. These numbers are not much smaller than "pep" organization attendance at other games. The best spirit was given by the band.

Earlier in the year The Nebraskan published an editorial indicating how the Cobs and the Tassels are not fulfilling their duties to the University and the student body in particular.

Instead of pushing promising sophomores tothey have made themselves into large, moneymaking bank accounts. The Cobs still pride themselves in being the richest student organization on the campus.

The almost negligible attendance at the last two basketball games epmhasizes this point even

Although they may not realize it, Cobs and Tassels are hurting themselves by their current attitude. Belonging to these organizations no longer holds the prestige it did only a few years more.-F.T.D.

Instead of pushing promising sophomores toof these games were played in the University ward Corn Cobs, a number of organized houses Coliseum, a large building situated on the have abandoned the organization, and advise

> In short, the Cobs, and the Tassels to a lesser degree, may soon find themselves very much out of the activity picture on the University campus. This would result in the virtual collapse of two organizations who could do so much but end up

The remedy for this situation would not be easy. It would be up to the officers and the faculty advisors to revamp their organizations, and lessen the emphasis on selling yearbooks, flowers

Requirements for membership would have to encompass more attendance at athletic contests, particularly basketball. Members would have to be picked more on the service they rendered to the organization and not by political influence wielded by active members.

The future of the Corn Cobs and the Tassels as effective, necessary organizations on this campus rests on how soon and how effectively they can drag themselves out of the monetary mire in which they have immersed themselves.

A few decibles of rabid enthusiasm from the crowd generates more spirit in a football or basketball player than all the balloons and flowers ever sold by any fresh-faced young sopho-

The Humor Magazine

Why doesn't the University of Nebraska have will stand the deficit. a campus humor magazine?

The objections to such a magazine revolve around two basic points: (1) how can the magazine be financially successful, and (2) what can be done to keep material of a questionable nature from appearing in the publication.

Last year a small group of interested students thought they had these two problems pretty well licked and presented a case before the Board of Student Publications in the spring.

The proposal was defeated with the provisions In the final decision, that if faculty supervision were provided and a more secure financial status could be assured, the magazine would receive a Andrews Hall. more favorable hearing.

A more suitable financial plan has been established by the group, stipulating that the magazine staff will finance the original outlay and, torches beiching close by, sat quietly smoking if the publication loses money, the group itself and drinking beer.

All that remains now before the final proposal is drafted for review again by the Pub Board is faculty backing.

Perhaps, if this support can be gained, Nebraska will not be without a humor magazine much longer .- B. B.

Afterthoughts

Where Next?

One evening recently the trap cover over the underground pipe system was open near

A mound of dirt had been piled up nearby and a small machine vibrated loudly on top of the ground.

In the hole, however, two men, their blow

The Nebraskan

FIFTY-FIVE YEARS OLD Member: Associated Collegiate Press , Intercollegiate Press entative: National Advertising Service, Published at: Room 20, Student Union

14th & R

University of Nebruska Lincoln, Nebraska

suse to be printed. February 3, 1985..... tecond class unatter at the post office in skin, under the act of August 4, 1912. EDITORIAL STAFF

BUSINESS STAFF Ass's Business Managers Blick Nett, Bill Bedwell, Connis Hurst, Don Beck LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

by Dick Bibler

"I LIKE THIS COURSE - IT'S SO PRACTICAL.

-The Challenge-

Real Business Of Life Is Building Of People

By HENRY J. KAISER

President, Kaiser Motor Co. Once in a discussion with a number of my associates, a question arose that caused me to express an idea that had run through our activities for many years. I asked them to stop and think

"What would you say is the real business we've always been in?" Each one of us in that particular gathering liked to think of himself as a builder.

"We are in the business of building material things," I said to my teammates, "And yet our real busmess is more significant than that; fundamentally we are in the business of building people."

Let's look out upon the wide horizon of this thought about building people. Do you agree that free men everywhere must forever be concerned with stimulating the complete development of the individual?

The priceless worth of the individual is at the heart of freedom, and our way of life, as opposed to systems that subjugate the individual to a dictator or an allpowerful state. An essence of freedom is the striving to create more

Does our free society, however, even begin to do all it could to awaken the creative, dynamic possibilities of individuals?

The reason I answer "decidely no" is because I believe that the best within an individual is infinitely great . . . far, far greater than he is likely even to begin to made many discoveries of undreamed-of capacities in peoplethe capacities of courage, imagination, love, work and achieve-

Nevertheless, all too many people self-impose limits upon their attainments. They place ceilings that are too low on themselves. They settle for life too cheaply, when they could afford the life abundant They drift along on lower

Biography

Today's Challenge was given to the Nebraskan by Henry J. Kaiser, president of the H. J. Kaiser Motor company and cofounder of Kaiser-Fraser Motor Company. He is president of numerous industrial corporations, including Kaiser Steel, Kaiser Metal Products and Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical, He has also served on various boards and committees dedicated to aid to foreign nations, planes of activity, when they could be tapping hidden funds of energy and accomplishment.

Knowing that locked up in your inner being there is a veritable powerhouse, how do you throw on the switch to release vast, untapped power?

Foremost-the evidence is overwhelming that you cannot begin to achieve your best unless you set some aim in life. Many an otherwise promising person doesn't

The destruction, by fire, of my fabulous mansion, and the ensueing loss of many priceless objects d'art has left me slightly unnerved this week.

Peering at my visage in the mirrow this morning, I noticed several lines crossing the bridge of my thin, sensitive nose, a sure sign that my cares have been weighing too heavily upon me.

(Some of my detractors insist that these lines are not so much the result of mental anguish as they are marks made by constant pressure from the rim of a glass. Such people are quite mad, and no attention should be paid their remarks. In fact, if I had my way, I know a few old Berber tortures that would set them straight soon enough.)

Jess Jestin'

My condition has been so serlous that my friends have advised me to retire to the fastness of a mountain retreat, in the hope that prayer and meditation might hasten my recovery. However, my sense of duty to the public, not to mention the incredible dearth of Scotch whiskey in most mountain retreats, has led me to remain here and continue my pot-boiling.

Recent observations of Our University Community seem to indicate that warmer weather has lessened the zeal of the campus crusaders. Or perhaps I have merely lost sight of them in the crowds of beer-bent students.

At any rate, I have not heard much from the saints this week. And it was this pleasing development that caused me to turn from the usually sizzling news columns of the Nebraskan and read some of the advertisements, thereby hitting upon two items deserving of

The first of these was an announcement that space is now available in Selleck Quadrangle. Well, gentlemen, as I wrote in Areopagitica, (a privately published book of verse I wrote when I was three.) "The truth will out." And I think someone let something

Yes the well-concealed truth is out in the open: there actually are people who prefer living in an inquitous fraternity house, or even in an evil old apartment, to residing in clean, spacious, and siry halls for men. I predict that there will be a shake-up over this. The other advertisement which caught my eye was one which caused a singular upheaval of my emotions, accompanied by sweaty palms and a strong desire to hide my eyes. It was from a local clothing store and concerned the Italian look. If these people can be trusted, that pretty little girl you winked at this morning will soon be attired in slim tapered knit pants and a merry knit shirt which matches them to a tee.

And as if that news wasn't enough to send me scurrying off to the hinter-lands, the blurb went on to list some of the dazzling new colors. Now I might be able to gaze upon pants in Mediterranean blue and sunshine yellow, but God preserve me from magnifico pink. I'm getting better every day, but I'll never be that strong,

Witch Hunts

To the Editor:

Just a line to say that it was a pleasure to meet you and the other members of your staff last week. It was nice of you to let me say few words at your Press Club luncheon. Mrs. Noyes and I enjoyed the occasion very much.

You may have noticed that Professor Pauling has been invited to lecture for a month at the University of Illinois. The president has been called on to defend this invitation on the basis that Pauling was once denied a passport.

We should certainly do ali we can to prevent witch hunts and to show the world that this nation really has some self-confidence. Dr. W. A. Noyes

-Join The Parade-

Truffle For President Shouted From Rooftops vote for H. Sam Truffle is

I ask all my readers to take the following campaign poster and tack it to the front door of their home town city hall. Thank you Amos, Persimone and Mother.

A voie for H. Sam Truffle is a vote for peace!!

Truffle kept us out of the war in Madagascar. He kept the infamous Keyosa Fishing Gorunds incident from developing into full-

He has always been the Senate's strongest advocate of peace and once said, "I am a man of peace and will go to war for it if necessary.

A vote for H. Sam Truffle is a vote for honesty!! Honest Sam Truffle deals his cards from the top of the deck. He has consistently been the Senate's strongest advocate of honesty and once said, "I will play no favorites, except when they are good paying friends, and I will not be bribed with trifles."

know where he wants to go in life.

ma or a magnificent source of opportunity for you. You can take whatever jobs comes along, or you can choose a work that calls forth your abilities and keeps you for-

A victorious attitude toward life, bora out of the confidence of knowing yourself and what you want to do, can subdue those disturbing inner conflicts and feelings of inferiority that are felt at some time by everybody. The qualities of teamwork and leadership can

I can only leave this question to you; you alone are the judge-

Is it worth the price to seek to achieve the best that is within you? You can help create the kind of environment that stimulates others around you to find a meaning and fulfillment to their indi-

May we never lose our spirit of dynamic onwardness! We can look forward to the need, more than ever before, for trained and educated men and women. The enormity of the coming task spells tremendous opportunity for men an women of vision and purpose, who will arise to achieve the best ever growing.

be put to account.

vidual lives

That itself can be either a dilem-

Truffle is truly a man of equality vote for equal rights!!

vote for the little man!!

Many great personages have called Truffle, "a very little man."

Truffle pledges, "I am a man of the little men and will aid the farmer and the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker" Truffle stands four feet seven in his bare feet-he does not wear shoes.

A vote for H. Sam Truffle is a

The Mirage

and once said, "I strongly support segregation and desegregatin and believe in equal rights for women and good coon dogs."

Vote for Truffle several times!! Even his political enemies love him-the leader of the opposition once said of Truffle, "Truffle is a dog." He shaves and washes his face thoroughly before kissing babies. Vote, vote, and vote again for Truffle!!!

Truffle speaks on various and assorted subjects: I, H. Sam truffle, pledge

1. to play the piano for effect, 2, not to shave my mustache, 3. to put a measure of caviar in every pot,

4. to keep America green, 5. to put out all camp fires, to keep them flying, 7. to keep the home fires burn-to not sit under the apple tree with anyone else but you, 9. to put gum in wrapper before discarding. 10, to close cover before striking,

11, to never draw to an inside straight. 12. to know all men by this seal

13 to live happily ever after. Jcin the "Truffle for President" parade of happy, singing souls. Be an active member of the Draft Truffle for President Committee. Sign the pledge and make a huge contribution to the campaign fund. Fight Communism, inefficiency in government, preferential treatment, the spoils system, the moneyed interests, the hoof and mouth disease and the plague. Organize your block and community. Send in for multi-colored pins, hats and T-shirts. Sell them

Sing the Truffle campaign song on your local street cornerfriends and neighbors: Vote for Truffle it's just for you

When they close the saloons, stagger over to the polls and mark

several ballots for Truffle, Truffle, that Truffle labors.

to your friends for a nice profit, within themselves.

Nature's Unsung Heroes: The Moose

Of creatures perplexed by misfortunes malign, And irked by vexations profuse; Of animals finny, or furry or bare Of scales or of feathers, of whiskers or hair (All accustomed to pain and abuse), There are none, I contend, on the face of the globe More entitled to weep with grief of Niobe,

The rotund rhinocerous rises and yawns At the leisurely hour of noon, In a land where no sign for the morrow is heard, Unfettered by circumstance, free as a bird, Where the year is an eternal June; But the Moose sallies forth in the chill of the morn, Unloved, unlamented, alone and forlorn, To graze 'till the rise of the moon.

Than our sad-favored cousin, the Moose.

In appearance the sort that Society shuns, His hair an unfashionable hue. Unprepossessing in feature and part, Unpampered by Nature, neglected by Art, His external merits are few; And, having no manners polite to extol. He lacks all the graces save greatness of soul, For his heart is both valiant and true.

Then drink to our fearless old friends of the North, Of the land of the hemlock and spruce! Defying his failings, his foes and his fate, Unmindful of masters, uncowed by the great, Undaunted by Nature's ill-use, Our bold, insurmountable, modest, unqualling, Indefatigible, ever-assailing Indomitable cousin, the Moose!

The Hole

A man dug deep in the ground until he had a bole. He did not want a hole. He desired a concavity. Being extremely thrifty and inventive, the man cut the hole into small pieces and sold each for hardly anything. J. Francis Flynn

Noli Me Tangere

A mean look hit me between the eyes and I shot it back with added momentum.

Ho! foolish one, the eye does not thwart me. Optical arrows can not Pierce my shield of innocence. Boulders of boldness cannot break loose the barriers you've built between us. Lothgar, damned lovable dog, quit licking my hand!

J. Francis Flyan

Dei Johnson