He said that the members of innocents are completely willing to fulfill their obligations in regard to this plan.

"I am sure that this will prove to be a great aid to Mortar Board and subtract less from their other more essential activities," Gourlay added.

Hove said he felt that "with the power the Student Council had granted to Innocents and Mortar Board" this plan was the only feasible way to maintain control. He pointed out that the proposal does not change the status quo but merely defines the various responsibilities.

Andy Smith, Innocents treasurer, said "I think this is one of the better solutions which could be devised. The committee will probably result in a better, smoother-running Ivy Day. It will also lighten the load which some groups have been carrying."
