Campus Survey: Newspapers Discuss Politics And Religion

By LUCI SWITZER, Copy Editor. Politics and religion are in the news on several campuses this week. Mock political conventions particularly seem to be the vogue at many colleges.

At Syracuse University in New York the local television station is planning to televise several sessions of the proceedings. In contrast to the bi-partisan type convention which was held here, Syracuse is actually holding two conventions, following the national procedure. Still a different type of mock convention is being planned at Kansas State. There the Rovinian party has been formed and will hold a typical convention. The main issues which have come out in discussion so far are the farm problem, integration of the South and foreign affairs.

While giving an hour exam, he left the key to the exam on the lecture desk trusting soul). As the students finished and handed in their papers, the key got lost in the shuffle. The professor, starting to grade the papers, decided he had lost the key and made out another one. When all of the papers had been graded, the key included the professor began to record the grades. The key had made a bouncing score of 70, barely average for the course.

Instead of mock convention, Colorado University is planning a UN speakers from various fields of world affairs. Playwright Arthur Miller will keynote the convention. K-State Chapel . . . Another item which should strike a responsive note for some University students comes from Kansas State where their new World War II All-Faiths Memorial Chapel is dedicated recently. According to the "Collegian" the chapel will provide a center for campus religious and cultural meetings. The chapel may also be used for weddings, funerals and other special religious services. The chapel includes an organ which will be used for noon hour organ recitals. The chapel was planned as a memorial to the 3000 Kansas Staters who served in World War II. It was financed by gifts contributed by friends and former K-State students.

tion. The editorial pointed out that the topics which included such things as the Dead Sea scrolls and the status of women in the Middle East should be of interest to students of every faith. Barely Passing . . . An unintentional "rate-yourself" test resulted in embarrassment for one University of Texas professor recently. While giving an hour exam, he left the key to the exam on the lecture desk trusting soul). As the students finished and handed in their papers, the key got lost in the shuffle. The professor, starting to grade the papers, decided he had lost the key and made out another one. When all of the papers had been graded, the key included the professor began to record the grades. tar heel editorial . . . Considering the reliance of most state university newspapers in matters of religion an item in the Chapel Hill "Daily Tar Heel," is of interest. The paper ran a short editorial encouraging attendance at a series of lectures sponsored by the B'nei B'rith Hillel Founda-

Candela: Architect To Discuss Thin-Shells

The most noted authority in the world on thin-shell construction, Felix Candela of Mexico City will visit the campus Wednesday through Friday.

Candela, an architect, scientist, and distinguished professor, will present a lecture Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Love Library auditorium. The topic will be: "New Architectural Horizons."

His interest in structural problems began early in his career, when he was given a fellowship in 1935 by the Academia de Bellas Artes de San Fernando, Spain, to study new trends in reinforced concrete design, in Germany.

He has designed and constructed some 200 shell structures in Mexico, including a Cosmic Ray Pavilion which has the thinnest shell roof ever poured, 1 1/2 inches thick.

He says the general objection to shell structures "is based on the common confusion between massiveness and strength. Massive structures are not necessarily stronger than the lighter ones. On the contrary, the former are more subject to deformation and failure."

"His visit is being sponsored by the department of architecture and the Extension Division.

Since 1892: Changes, Crusades Found Typical Throughout 'Rag's Varied History

By LINDA BUTHMAN, Nebraskan Reporter

Crusades, and challenges directed at the Administration and student body by the Nebraskan, University student paper, are not ideas foreign to past Nebraskan staffs. As early as 1925 such vigorous campaigns have been characteristic of the paper.

The 1925 Cornhusker carried this quotation: "During the past year the Nebraskan has lost some of its conservatism; it has carried on vigorous drives against what it has regarded as unwholesome situations about the University State and nation wide publicity have been received over a number of discussions."

A two-column monthly magazine under private ownership in 1892, The Nebraskan grew to a fourteen column-weekly in 1893, and to a seven column daily paper in 1901.

Soon after the Nebraskan's arrival, it began running competition to a similar publication, The Hesperian. "Bitter feuds between the two papers" were brought to a peaceful close when the consolidated paper, The Nebraskan-Hesperian, merged. Students, faculty members and Lincoln businessmen were the share holders of the private Hesperian publishing company which controlled the paper until 1905.

Great things were expected of the college paper by 1925. "The 'Rag,' as it is known on the campus, has come to fill other requirements besides those of a news origin, and M. M. Fogg, director of the School of Journalism, hopes to make it a daily Lincoln paper as the School of Journalism grows," was the statement printed in that year's Cornhusker.

During this time students, now national figures, held positions on the Nebraskan staff. The following are included:

Ralph E. Johnson, the first Editor of the Nebraskan; featured in Who's Who of America; Supreme Organizer of Modern Woodmen of America, fraternal insurance society; City editor of Call, early Lincoln newspaper.

Hugh Cox, editor of the Nebraskan, second semester, 1925; Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice until 1945. At the University he was a member of Innocents Society, Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Upsilon.

William T. McCleery, Editor of the Nebraskan, first semester,

For an appointment to interview Miss Sandstedt, or for more information regarding these positions, contact Mrs. Frances Vogel, Division of Student Affairs, Ellen Smith Hall.

Ag Club Plans Stock Judging Competition

Students at the University will be given a chance to prove their livestock judging prowess Saturday when the Block and Bridle club will hold its annual livestock judging contest at the College of Agriculture.

The contest will be divided into junior and senior divisions. The junior division will be open to students who have had no advanced judging courses. Any eligible student may enter the contest individually and organized groups on campus may enter a team in the contest.

The high scoring team will be determined after the judging has been completed and the scores of the top 5 individuals of each group will be consolidated to compose the team score. A traveling trophy is awarded to the winning team. Past winners have been Alpha Gamma Rho and Alpha Gamma Sigma.

The senior contest is open to students who have completed one semester or more of advanced judging. There is no team scoring in the senior contest and the high individual receives a watch. Hogs, sheep and cattle will be judged and awards will be given to the high individual of both divisions for each kind of livestock.

NUCWA-YWCA: Situation In Cyprus Topic For Discussion

By BARB SHARP, Copy Editor

University students will fly to the island of Cyprus Thursday at 7:15 p.m., for an "on the scene" report, but they will not leave their seats in Love Library Auditorium.

Using as a theme "Mission to Cyprus," a joint NUCWA-YWCA meeting will illustrate the points which Dag Hammarskold, United Nations Secretary-General, would discover if he were to visit Cyprus on his current Near East tour.

Representing the Cyprus citizens in the dispute will be Sabah Kuskabul, Afghanistan. Steve Georgios of Athens will speak for the Greeks, and Bob Ireland of Lincoln will present the view of the Turkish government.

British security forces will be represented by Charles Gomon, a senior political science major.

The role of Dag Hammarskold will be played by a prominent University personality who is familiar with the situation, according to Grace Harvey, NUCWA planning vice president. His name will remain a secret until the meeting "so as not to prejudice the negotiations."

Students will meet under the eye of British troops of the Highland Light Infantry, a unit actually helping to police Cyprus.

The audience will participate by asking questions of the student "experts" and thus help Hammarskold in his attempt to find a solution to the problem.

"Only by participating in discussion sessions such as this," commented Gomon, president of NUCWA, "can we realize the reasons for frictions which grow up among the allies. If NATO troops are sent to Cyprus, American soldiers might be sent also."

Glenna Berry, YWCA chairman of this mass meeting, announced that faculty members are especially invited and all University students are urged to attend.

Fine Arts: Students To Attend Festival

Approximately 650 students from 100 Nebraska high schools will take part in the annual University Fine Arts Festival sponsored by the school of Fine Arts Friday and Saturday.

The festival will have activities for music, speech and art students.

The music program will include instruments, piano or organ given voice, band instruments, orchestra 15-minute individual lessons in by faculty members of the Department of Music. Only juniors and seniors will take part in the Saturday activities. Seniors will have the opportunity to audition for entry into the department next fall.

Speech activities scheduled for Friday and Saturday will include judging of one-act plays, dramatic readings, humorous readings, poetry reading, radio newscasts, discussion and debate. Ratings will be announced at 3 p.m. Saturday at Howell Memorial Theater.

Art students will see demonstrations by University staff members and work in different media in the studios. Art work by the students participating will be on display in the University Art Galleries.

A luncheon for all festival participants will be held noon Saturday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Price: Lectures On Math Scheduled

Dr. G. Baley Price, chairman of the department of mathematics at the University of Kansas, will give a series of lectures Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

He will discuss "Professional Opportunities in Mathematics" at 3 p.m. Thursday in Room 104 Burnett Hall. Friday night he will talk on "Some Famous Problems of Modern Mathematics." This speech will be at 8 p.m. in Room 108, Burnett Hall.

He will lecture on "New Mathematics Courses for Freshmen and Sophomores" at the meeting of the Nebraska-South Dakota section of the Mathematical Association of America to be held Saturday morning.

The lecture series is being sponsored by the MAA and the University Convocation committee.

Dr. Price, a member of the Kansas faculty since 1907, served as an operations analyst for the Army Air Force during World War II and was a consultant to the office of the Secretary of Defense in 1951.

He is editor of the Bulletin of the American Mathematical Society and has been a member of the board of governors of the MAA since 1952. He served as chairman of the committee on the regional development of mathematics of the National Research Council from 1952 to 1954.

Hagan: Hostess To Present Program

Mrs. Arthur Hagan of the University Club will present a program entitled "The Hostess With The Mostest Originality" Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Union Faculty Lounge.

The program is the second program in the "Tips For The Contemporary Hostess" series. The series is designed for all women students on the campus.

Mrs. Hagan's program will include original centerpiece ideas, with tips on centerpiece arrangements for special occasions.

She has been with the University Club as hostess in the dining room for 12 years. For years she has been well known as the foremost table decorator and party planner in the Lincoln area.

The Foundation and You . . .

An exhibit in the Ralph Mueller Galleries of Health Science

Recently, the exhibit entitled "Able to Live Again" was shown at the Museum. It depicted how the health sciences are focused on the rehabilitation of the handicapped. The University was able to borrow this display from the Cleveland Health Museum because of a substantial gift to the Foundation.

Many Alumni and friends of the University are vitally interested in the Museum, and their generosity and support have helped it to become one of the finest in the Nation.
