New Chairmanships: Howard Ottoson Named As New Ag Ec Chairman

Dr. Howard Ottoson, associate professor of agriculture, was named as successor to C. Clyde Mitchell, demoted department chairman, at the Board of Regents meeting Saturday.

Three other changes in department chairmanships were also approved at Saturday's meeting. Dr. Alan Bates, associate professor of sociology, was named to succeed T. J. Thompson, who has been serving as executive secretary since 1954. Thompson is an associate professor of chemistry.

Named to succeed Dr. Boyd Carter as acting chairman of the department of Romance languages was Dr. Charles Colman, associate professor of Romance language.

Dr. M. L. Weaver was named acting chairman of the department of botany. He succeeds Dr. Winfield Ray who was granted a two-year leave of absence to join the University's mission to Ataturk University in Turkey.

Chancellor Clifford Hardin said at the meeting that no issue of academic freedom was involved in the demotion of Mitchell and appointment of Ottoson.

Academic freedom is not restricted to department chairman, but extends to the whole faculty, Hardin said.

Hardin said that Lambert's decision to replace Mitchell was made to "promote the agricultural extension program and to progress toward the offering of the Ph. D. degree" and that he concurred in Lambert's judgment.

Regent Bernard Greenberg of York, acting president, asked the Chancellor whether Mitchell had applied for membership in the graduate faculty, a necessary pre-work.
