the NEBRASKAN

One of the late returnees to school from the famed CU Days celebration last weekend at Boulder was asked of his opinion of the "Pixie Press." He countered rather shakily "Did the Nebraskan go out of business?"

Top Production:

'Mary Of Scotland' Called Howell's Best

By ELLIE GUILLIATT

As Elizabeth says in the last scene of "Mary of Scotland," "it is not what happened that is true, but what men believe..." and this I think is keen perception on the part of the playwright Maxwell Anderson, and on that quotation I base this criticism.

As for what "happened" last night, a wonderful thing happened, a play was presented as a play should be presented — with sensitivity, with artistry, and with a spirit of theatre which was not a wraith but a living being from the opening curtain to the final call! As for what I believe, I sincerely believe that this is one of the finest plays I have ever had the pleasure of seeing during my university career, and the best play that has yet been done on Howell Theatre stage.

It would be an injustice to devote this column to the trifling weaknesses I saw in the face of the whole, and I must admit, moving production of "Mary." So allow me to rave — The most outstanding character of the play was Elizabeth, played by Bonna Tebo. Here was the virgin queen, with all her brilliance, all her regal, polished treacherousness, all her hollow triumph. Miss Tebo commanded the stage in every one of her scenes with a marvelous understanding and portrayal of her role.

Mary was played beautifully by Joey Margolin, who gave the audience a many faceted, womanly queen, a queen full of tenderness and vitality; she made us feel the wretchedness of enforced deposition and the final victory of integrity.

Jack Parris brought us a Bothwell "full of sound and fury," he filled his scenes with suppressed violence, and brought to the stage a character animated with energy, complimenting the more gentle Mary.

John Knox, the fire-breathing Scottish prophet, was admirably portrayed by Gerald Carlson. With a voice that wailed like bitter highland winds, he threw his vituperations at Mary, and though he began with intensity, and never once slackened, I firmly believed there was always more energy, always a slightly higher pitch for him to reach, if he needed it.

I could go on naming each member of the cast, for each in his own way contributed to the overall picture of the play, but it is enough to say that if I had twenty-one roses, I would gladly give one to each member.

The sets are fine, fine in the most artistic sense of the term, the lighting equally beautiful. In short, here is a play worth seeing, here is an example of theatre which rises above "educational" theatre, here is a production of such stuff as critics' dreams are made on.

Replaces Westbrook:

'Top Flight Singer,' Lishner Chosen To Direct NU Singers

Leon Lishner, at present a free lance singer in New York City, has been appointed to replace Dr. Arthur Westbrook as Professor of Voice and Director of the University Singers, according to Dr. David Foltz, chairman of the School of Music. The change will become effective Sept. 1, 1956.

Lishner has been recognized as one of the most important young singers in the music world, according to Dr. Foltz. He has enjoyed the unique position of having achieved equal success in varied fields of the entertainment world, Foltz stated.

He has worked in opera, in television and on Broadway, as well as in concert, oratorical and operetta.

Lishner did his graduate work at the Juillard School of Music, long recognized as the outstanding school of music in the country, and at the Trinity College of Music at London.

He starred in the last three world premiers of the works of Gian-Carlo Menotti. These include the Broadway performance and two European tours in "The Consul," on Broadway and television in "The Saint of Bleeker Street" and on all NBC performances of "Amahal and the Night Visitors." He has appeared extensively on television in many performances on the NBC TV Opera Theater, on Omnibus on CBS TV and on the Steve Allen and the Ed Sullivan shows.

Lishner has appeared with the Havana, the Pittsburgh, the Montreal and the Philadelphia opera companies and with the Baltimore, the Philadelphia, and the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestras.

The appointment was a result of the screening of several hundred top flight young men in the music business, Dr. Foltz explained. These were later eliminated to forty, then to nineteen and finally to two.

"We were looking for a proven fine teacher and a proven fine singer," Foltz said. "We needed a man who could work in the upper workshop who would be in charge of all of the dramatic acting there. Lishner is exceptionally capable in all these respects."

Foltz described Lishner as "a personable young man and an absolutely top-flight singer — the best quality" professor we could possibly get."

Lishner was on the University campus for a few days, Foltz said. He sang for a faculty committee and for Dr. Westbrook. Everyone was most enthusiastic about him, Foltz added. The faculty was most cooperative in providing a salary which would attract him, he said.

Asked why, at the peak of his singing career, he would want to give it up to teach in a university, Lishner told Dr. Foltz that teaching had always been his major ambition.

"I want to pass on the things that I have learned in my work to young men and women," he said. "I want to do it while I am at my peak and can do it well—not afterwards, when I have become a has-been."

Dr. Foltz said that Lishner would be off the campus occasionally each year to appear in major performances, so that he would not be in complete retirement from active performance.

"I cannot stress enough the valuable addition to the staff that Lishner will be. He is presently at the peak of his career and extraordinarily fortunate to interest him in a teaching position," Foltz said.

Hardin To Visit Turkish College

... To Leave About July 1

Chancellor Clifford Hardin is planning a trip to Turkey this summer to help with the International Cooperation Administration program.

According to James Pittenger, Administrative Assistant, the Chancellor will leave around July 1. Hardin had planned to go this spring but could not work the trip into his schedule at that time.

Dr. Marvel Baker, a University animal husbandry professor on leave of absence, returned here last year and invited Hardin to Ataturk University. He is the dean and chief agriculture administrator at Ataturk. Baker and a group of specialists have studied the situation in Turkey and have set up a campus plan, faculty requirements and a building program. The ICA project is directed by University Mission with funds from the Turkish government and the ICA commission.

Nebraska's contract with ICA provides that the state land grant school (the University) provide aid and assistance, as necessary, to the Turkish project.

At the present time there are several Turkish professors here working under the Project's plan for faculty instruction.

Under the ICA program the United States lends Turkey assistance in establishing better schools. The main emphasis of the program is being put on Agriculture. It was started in April 1955.

Professor Comments:

Demotion Of Dr. Mitchell 'One Example' Says Moore

Dr. Donald Moore, whose resignation as professor of physics and chairman of the department, was accepted by the Board of Regents Saturday, has issued a press release for The Nebraskan concerning the question of academic freedom and outside pressures at the University.

Moore's resignation was announced April 18. He said he was leaving the University because "greater research and salary opportunities" were available in private industry.

Moore said that the demotion of Dr. Clyde Mitchell was "but one example" of the University's unconcern with the free enterprise of ideas.

Mitchell, who is in Rome on a Fulbright Lectureship, is expected to comment soon on his demotion.

Moore's Statement

"Perhaps it is because I am both a native of the state and an alumnus of the University, but I find myself concerned about the direction in which our University of Nebraska is moving.

I have reluctantly come to the conclusion that the present administration of our University is not concerned with the free enterprise of ideas—at either the level of the departmental chairman or of the individual staff member.

The demotion of Dr. Mitchell is but one example. There is a clear impression of a conflict between integrity and expediency. He who doubts that outside pressure influenced the Mitchell demotion ought to read, side by side, the public statements of Regent Welsh, the Hall County Farm Bureau, and the series of conflicting statements which have been issued by the administration of the University.

The succession of events is such that it will now be next to impossible for the present administration to build a strong Department of Agricultural Economics, and all problems of staff procurement are seriously aggravated."
