Dr. Hardin 'Impressed' By Progress In Turkey

. . . Returns From Two-Week Visit

Chancellor Clifford Hardin was "very favorably impressed" with the work he saw being done in Turkey, he said on his return from a two-week stay in Turkey.

Dr. Hardin visited Ataturk University in Turkey at the invitation of the Turkish minister of education.

A team from the University, headed by Dr. Marvel Baker, former assistant director of agricultural extension, is working in Turkey for the establishment of a land-grant university in Turkey patterned after Nebraska.

"General outlines for the university have been determined and general specification for the buildings are being drawn up," Hardin said.

"They are now conducting a national competition to select the architect for the final plans. A panel of judges has been set up to judge the designs submitted," he added.

He described the site of the new University at Erzurum, as being somewhat similar to that of the University of Colorado at Boulder.

The university has acquired 8500 acres in a broad valley between the mountain ranges, he explained.

Actual construction work is expected to be started in the fall and it is hoped that a few classes may

Dr. Stearns: Reading Clinic Planned

Why reading is a problem and how to develop a reading program in secondary schools will be discussed in a clinic Monday and Tuesday at the University.

Dr. Gertrude Stearns, associate director of high school and college reading center at Boston University, will conduct the clinic.

The program follows:

Monday — 10:30-noon, demonstration of reading techniques, University High School; 1:30-2 p.m., "What Every Secondary School Educator Should Know About Reading Improvement at the High School Level," Room 108, Burnett Hall.

Cornhuskers

Students who purchased 1956 Cornhuskers and have not yet picked them up should do so immediately. The Cornhusker office in the Union basement will be open from 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Hall; and 3-4 p.m., "What to Use in Developing a High School Reading Program," Room 108, Burnett Hall.

Tuesday — 10:30-noon, demonstration of reading techniques, University High School; 1:30-2 p.m., "How to Do It: Action Plans for Developing Secondary School Reading Programs"; and 3-4 p.m., panel discussion on "We Tried It — Experiences and Problems in Developing Secondary School Reading Programs."

Members of the panel discussion will be: Richard Short, assistant principal of Grand Island High School; Dayton Rothrock, former superintendent of Gresham Public Schools; Mrs. Fannie Ellinger of Lincoln Public Schools; and Dr. Stearns.

Hardins Return

Chancellor and Mrs. Hardin are greeted by their family as they arrive at the airport from the trip to Turkey. Mrs. Hardin, who accompanied her husband on the trip said that the Turkish women are well-educated and be started in 1957, but probably a full scale program cannot begin until 1958, Dr. Hardin said.

While in Turkey, Dr. Hardin had a short visit with Celal Bayar, the president of Turkey.

"He told me that when Ataturk was alive they had discussed a university in eastern Turkey, but it had been delayed by the war. He was very happy that it was finally going to be a reality," Hardin said.

He explained that the Nebraska staff in Ankara has two major responsibilities. One is the planning of the new Ataturk University, and the other is helping with the instructional program at Ankara.

"I was very pleased with the work of our staff, they seem to be more progressive in the larger cities. She noted that she did see a few still wearing veils. The Hardin children, each receiving a gift from Turkey are (left to right) Cindy, Sue Nancy and Clifford, Jr.

ing in industry, agriculture and in education.

"They are looking to the west for their ideas," he explained.

In this connection, he pointed out that there are presently 32 teachers and scholars from the University of Ankara in this country doing additional work; and all of them have Ph. D degrees, he added.

Most of these are now connected with the University and are living in Lincoln," he explained.

Present plans are for Ataturk University to be composed of three colleges — a College of Letters and Sciences, a College of Engineering and Architecture, and a College of Agriculture.

In addition to the three colleges, the Nebraska study group has recommended the following all-university service divisions: library, health, physical education, student affairs, buildings and grounds, and business records.

Mrs. Hagan To Talk On Centerpieces

"Centerpieces for Special Events" will be discussed by Mrs. Arthur Hagan of the University Club, Lincoln, at the Union Thursday of Nebraska's Student Union Thursday at 4 p.m.

This will be the last in the series sponsored by the Union entitled "Trends in Today's Living."

Mrs. Hagan is one of Lincoln's authorities on table decorations and is now writing a book on the subject.
