

Lebanon Plan: Cooperative Planning Vital Says Dr. Heagerty

"In the minds of many Americans, national planning as well as community planning is an uneasy bedfellow with freedom," Dr. Frank Heagerty, superintendent of Lebanon, Mo., schools, said Monday afternoon.

But, he said, planning is necessary and must be a cooperative effort and not super-imposed by one person or group.

He spoke on the topic, "A School and Community Get Together."

McLaughlin Tells Need For Air Ed

A way to ensure a strong United States is through aviation education in our classrooms, Lt. Col. Mervyn McLaughlin, commander of the U.S. Air Force Reserve Center at Des Moines, said Friday.

Americans must learn the importance of airplanes as the English learned the importance of the fleet, he said.

Lieutenant Colonel McLaughlin participated in the University Air Age Workshop Friday.

He told the workshop that airplanes have increased the conflict between ideologies by bringing people into closer contact. He said it was necessary for the American people to work with the people around the world in order that they may understand our way of living.

And he stressed that the development of air power includes all phases of aviation, commercial, military and private.

"Air power is in the minds of the American citizen. It lies in the minds of men and not in machines," he concluded.

Dr. Heagerty, a prominent educational and civic leader, said the basis for dealing with the public was "A Sucker Is Born Every Minute." This, he said, was replaced by the slogan, "Build A Better Mousetrap," followed by "Sell Them," and "Keep Them Informed."

The present-day techniques, he added, rest on "Participation."

He called the advisory committee one of the main techniques.

"Modern civilization has brought marvelous advances in material things. The world is looking for a system which will enable men to live peacefully together and enjoy these advances.

"The system will not likely develop accidentally. It should develop within the framework of our basic cultural, economic, spiritual, and political systems."

Players '56:

KUON-TV Completes Series Of Original Drama Programs

An ambitious series of television dramas has been completed at KUON-TV, the University educational television station. Called "Players '56," the programs were produced on alternate Saturdays and gave university actors as well as crews and viewers a half hour of "live" drama.

Every program was either an original script or an original adaptation. Hans Christian Andersen's "The Emperor's New Clothes" was the premiere production. Several of A. A. Milne's works were also adapted.

The dramas were aimed at both adults and children. Talent and crew were students in radio, television and theater at the University. Dr. Clarence Flick, head of the Radio and Television section at the University, was producer of the series.

Each program was produced on a tight two-week schedule. Two weeks before air time the script was completed and duplicated. Production personnel were assigned at this time. These included an assistant producer, unit manager, announcer, set designer, costume manager and script girl. Students were selected on the basis of production experience.

Finally early Saturday morning the sets, props, costumes and talent were transported to the studio. Mikes were placed, lights positioned, the set put up and the actors and actresses alerted.

A last minute run through for cameramen to check angles, light flare, flat height and the other details which required last minute checking was held.

Then at 9:30 a.m. the director signaled a "Stand-by" and "Players '56" was on the air.

The following half-hour dramas were presented:

An adaptation of Hans Christian Andersen's "The Emperor's New Clothes."

Adaptations of A. A. Milne's "When We Were Very Young," and "Now We Are Six."

Adaptation of John M. Synge's "Riders to the Sea."

Original scripts by Dr. Flick were titled "The Belltower" and "The Gondola." Dr. Flick also did the adaptations mentioned above.
