Regents Appointment:

Geske Named Galleries Head

Norman Geske, acting director of the University Art Galleries for three years, has been appointed director of the Galleries by the Board of Regents.

Geske came to the University in 1950 as assistant director of the galleries. He was a graduate of the University of Minnesota and took advanced studies in New York.

Prior to coming to the University, Geske had been curator of the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis.

Duward Laging was the last regular director of the University Art Galleries.

In other business, action on proposed leases of land to three agencies for establishment of a rehabilitation center for handicapped children was delayed by the Regents.

Land in Omaha for the center was purchased by the Regents with a special fund appropriated by the Legislature. The center is to be used in connection with the College of Medicine.

The Regents approved a resolution endorsing health and accident insurance for University students. The resolution authorizes Business Manager John Selleck to supply lists of student names to an insurance company furnishing a group rate for students.

Federal grants of $101,357 were accepted for research and education at the University College of Medicine.

A third of the research funds will provide backing for new projects. The remaining money will support continuation of present experiments.

In addition to the federal grants, the Board of Regents accepted $1,943 in grants from non-governmental sources.

A grant of $23,648.81 was accepted by Regents from William Schoonover of Newark, N.J. Mr. Schoonover, a 1906 graduate of the University, died in 1945. The funds are to be used for scholarships.

NSA Representative

James Pomroy, vice president of the National Student Association of Philadelphia, visits with Dean of Student Affairs J. P. Colbert. Pomroy was in Lincoln to discuss plans for affiliating the University with NSA. He had conferences with Colbert and Student Council President Bruce Brugmann.

Pomroy:

Apathy Said Main Trouble With Student Government

James Pomroy, vice president of the National Student Association of Philadelphia, said Monday that the basic problem with student government is apathy.

"Too many college students don't care what the student council is doing and ultimately this may be caused by the uninteresting programs set up by the councils," Pomroy stated.

A 1956 graduate of Allegheny College in Meadville, Pa., Pomroy is serving a one year term as Student Government vice president of the NSA. He was in Lincoln to discuss possible affiliation of the University with the 315 member organization.

"My job at present is to get in touch with the 120 member colleges in this region and to sell NSA to the 20 non-members.

We're not just an honorary organization. Our basic interest is the improvement of student governmental setups on all college campuses in the country. We believe that USA can help a school in both the philosophical and mechanical aspects of student government," Pomroy said.

NSA tries to evaluate the needs and set up an interesting and practical program for student body governing groups across the country, he noted.

"But we don't do this by pressure either on the students themselves or on the administration. "Student roundtables, discussions with the administration and our national meetings are all a part of the program toward the betterment of a university," Pomroy said.

He stated that the "positive approach" in solving the problems of any campus will always be better than a negative attitude on the part of either students or the administration.

The NSA has a library in Philadelphia, he said in which cases student government groups have decided are filed. "This aids councils and faculties to see how other colleges have solved problems they are facing.

Pomroy met with Student Council President Bruce Brugmann and Dean of Student Affairs J. P. Colbert to present the organizational program of the NSA.

"It must be remembered," he said, "that our group is not one to push 'elements' on the campus. We don't 'favor' Greeks or independents, but rather show them how co-operation between them and the administration can make the school a greater institution.

Dean Colbert said that a national organization such as NSA could be a means of assisting the entire student body toward a stronger and more unified organization in which the students would be ready and willing to accept greater responsibilities in student self-government—provided it has and maintains proper leadership.

Dr. Carter Awarded

Dr. Boyd Carter, professor of romance languages, is decorated as an "officer de l'instruction publique" by Louis de Cabrol, French consul-general in Denver, as Chancellor Clifford Hardin looks on. This is the higher of the two Palmes Academiques awarded by the French government to educators. Five outstanding French students at the University were also awarded.

Books were given to Polly Downs, best first-year student; Marie Wright, best second-year student, and Pat Alvord, best third-year student. Shirley Holcomb received the Duhamel Medal for the best scholastic record in French. Diane Knotek was given the Ravel Medal for contributing the most to the appreciation of French music.

NU Controversy:

Lecture Impressions False Students Say

Three university students from Palestine took issue with a lecturer on campus Friday, claiming his speech gave erroneous and misleading impressions of Moslem and Arab relationships with the U.S.

The three objected when the meeting was not opened to discussion following what they termed a highly controversial speech on the North African problem by Dr. Ian Forbes Fraser, director of the American Library in Paris.

Dr. Fraser addressed approximately 150 students and faculty members at a Romance language meeting Friday morning at Love Memorial Library. Last month Dr. Fraser toured Algeria on an official visit for the French government.

In his speech he emphasized the threat of Communism in North Africa and stated "about one-half of the rebel bands in Algeria are infiltrated by or commanded by Communists."

Following his speech the Palestine youths raised their objections, but the speaker, because of time limitations, left the floor. The three then voiced their opinions before the audience.

One student, Hussein Elmossa said the doctor left false impressions concerning relationship between Islam religion and Communism, which Elmossa said are basically opposite.

Another student, Abdul Rahaim, pointed out Moslem nations definitely are pro-U.S. He added that "Turkey, a Mohammedan nation, is one of the best friends of the U.S.; Pakistan, a nation of 80,000,000 has prohibited the Communist party; that Iraq has banned the Communists and that many other Mohammedan nations have done the same."

"If Dr. Fraser is concerned about the U.S. being careful about Arab nations because of communist infiltration" Rahaim said, "he should be more worried about France—a country of which about one-half of the members of Parliament are avowed Communists."

Boyd G. Carter, Professor of Romance Languages, was awarded the French government decoration Palmes Academiques "officer de l'instruction publique" for his outstanding work as an educator in French and his work in publications in French.

Diane Knotek was awarded the Ravel Medal for her contributions to the appreciation of French Music and Shirley Holcomb received the Duhamel medal as the outstanding major in French, both scholastically and for activity participation.

'Stop And Start':

'Desperate Hours' Cast Putting Play In Shape

By DICK SHUGRUE Copy Editor

When Max Whittaker said, "Stop and start over" his crew did just that.

Whittaker, a staff member of the department of speech and dramatic art, is directing the first University Theater play of the season, "The Desperate Hours."

And he wants the best possible job from every member of the cast. At present, blocking—learning the place for each line of the play—is the main order of business for his cast.

The scripts have pretty much been thrown away. Lines have been committed to memory and, as Dallas S. Williams, the director of University Theater put it, "The play's in good shape."

Filing the many colored water paints in the scenery department workshop, Williams stopped long enough to state that the while season looks better at this point than last year's bill looked at any point.

"That's probably because we have a much better series of plays. We have some firsts and we have some real interest in theater on the campus," he stated.

"Whittaker is very pleased with the cast he is working with on 'The Desperate Hours' and along with Professor Oscar Mandel and I, he has been carefully screening prospective actors for the 'Garden of Asclepius.'"

Mandel, an assistant professor of English, wrote the second play. Open tryouts are being held through this afternoon in the Howell Theater.

No scenery was in the workshop while Williams was talking. "It's all gone. We've finished it—about 95 per cent of it."

"That means that the performers will have an added advantage in working with the scenery before the Oct. 16 opening of 'The Desperate Hours.'"

Williams said that the paint filing process was in preparation for building the scenery for the second play. "I don't think we have ever been so much ahead of ourselves as we are right now. But we have to be."

"If the University Theater is going to be a success this year, we must be ready for the plays technically as well as dramatically," Williams declared.

NU Co-ed Crowned Princess

The University added another queen to its growing list of royalty as Shari Lewis, junior in Teachers College, was named 1957 American Dairy Princess at the International Dairy Show in Chicago.

Miss Lewis, who represented Nebraska in the Miss United States contest this summer, won a $1000 scholarship, a complete wardrobe and a symbol of office, a gilded cowbell.

She will also travel through this country and Europe as a good-will representative of the American dairy industry.

Miss Lewis is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority.
