Shoulder Patch Contest

Five designs in the University ROTC contest to choose a shoulder patch have been selected by a student committee for final consideration, according to John Dawson, chairman of the committee, center. The five patches will be sent to Col. Chester Diestel, professor of military science and tactics, for the final selection of the winner. Announcement of the winner will come at the Military Ball or at a special ceremony in December, Dawson said. Designer of the five under consideration are Jerry Sewell, Herschell Turner, D. L. Pakieser and Dallas Wiebe, who turned in two of winning designs. Dawson explained that a committee of five cadets chose the twenty top designs entered in the contest, each receiving ten merits each. They then chose the best five. Other members of the committee (from left) were Cadet 2nd Lts. Sam Van Pelt, Roye Lindsey, Robert Helton and Cadet Dick Fellman.

On To CU:

Tulagi's, The Sink Not Sole Features

By FRED DALY
Managing Editor

Since a large percentage of the University's undergraduate student body is trekking West again this year, it is only fitting that a little vital information on the destination be disseminated.

The University of Colorado at Boulder, Colo., was chartered in 1861 by the First Territorial Legislature of Colorado. Some years later, in 1877, the university finally got around to offering instruction.

CU is located on 273 acres of hillside in Boulder, a city approximately 75 miles east-southeast from Rabbit Ears Pass (el. 9680), a break in the towering Rabbit Ears Range. The highest peak in the Rabbit Ears Range is Rabbit Ears Peak, which seems like a pretty good arrangement.

Rabbit Ears Range and its two components were named for geographical characteristics which, strangely enough, reminded some itinerate French trappers of rabbit ears. However, most sensible rabbits find the altitude (10,779 feet) too high for them.

Boulder is a sparkling little city of 19,999 persons, according to the 1950 census.

The architecture on the campus of the Spanish type, of native limestone. All the newer buildings are of generally the same type of design. The dormitory system is one of the most extensive in the conference.

Instead of a well-defined fraternity and sorority row as there is at Nebraska, CU's houses are spread through the neighborhood near the campus.

In many respects, Colorado is much like the University, although there are 626,000 books in its library as compared to 550,000 in ours.

Among the notable buildings on the campus is the museum, which possesses a complete herbarium. The high-altitude observatory located at Climax, Colo., contains the only coronagraph in the world, and is operated in conjunction with Harvard University.

The first building on campus was Old Main, completed in 1877, through funds from the state legislature and equal donations by the citizens.

There is a similar setup at Tulagi's, which is supported by CU students and migrating Nebraskans.

It is to such a place of color and tradition that Cornhuskers will flock in their eagerness to learn more about this great university. Others, who cannot scalp their tickets, will go to the game.

Sunshine and science...

new Florida "Show"

Believing that the future of aviation lay with larger aircraft, higher speeds and greater ranges, the founders of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft established an ironclad policy demanding constant striving to develop aircraft engines that would continually surpass previous accomplishments. The intervening restless years at P & W A have been filled with continuing progress which proved the wisdom of that early decision. Brand new areas of technology were explored; recognition as undisputed leader in its field was attained; expansion to accommodate the growth of the company resulted in a nationwide network of auxiliary facilities.

Florida — long America's year 'round playground — is now providing ground for the continued expansion of America's foremost aircraft engine builder.
