During the preliminary session of Thursday's ROTC lab (Army) one Napoleonic young cadet in a duo-pointed beanie was very pompously strutting to and fro barking out various orders. After a very brief moment of silence this senior officer yelled the following command to his platoon leaders who were busily taking roll, "All those who are not present are absent!"

Military Ball: Honorary Commandant Selection Change Okayed

The new proposal for the selection of the Honorary Commandant for the Military Ball has been approved by the Judiciary Committee of the Student Council, according to Ron Blue, Military Ball committee chairman.

The proposals was offered to the Student Council last week by Lt. Cdr. D. B. Edge, Naval ROTC instructor and officer in charge of the Ball.

He asked that each organized women's house elect two candidates from any class who would be interviewed by representatives of the ROTC branches.

Candidates are to be selected on the basis of beauty, personality and popularity on the campus.

A joint committee composed of three ROTC faculty advisers and five cadet representatives of the three services will interview candidates in the Union Monday. It will reduce the total number of applicants to nine to compete for the titles Miss Army, Miss Navy and Miss Air Force.

Balloting for the three titles will be held in the ROTC classes before Nov. 16. The three will then become candidates in an all-campus election for the position of Honorary Commandant.

All male students who hold tickets to the Ball will be eligible to vote for the Honorary Commandant in the Union Nov. 28.

The winner of the title "Honorary Commandant" will be presented the evening of the formal. Cmdr. Edge said the reason for the proposal was to transfer the election to the student body. The previous method was "wholly insufficient," he said.

"This is our way to get the Military Ball back on the campus, to get more spirit," Cmdr. Edge added.

'Open Meeting' Monday: Tassels To Discuss HC Queen Elections

A motion to put the Homecoming Queen election procedure before an open meeting of the Student Council student activities committee was defeated by the Council Wednesday.

Tassels, women's pep organization now in control of the elections, will hold its own open meeting on the subject at 5 p.m. Monday in Union Room 313, according to Nancy Tucker, Tassels representative to the Council.

Bev Deepe, senior Council member, said that since Tassels were taking their own initiative, they should be allowed to handle the matter. Some Council members feel that the Council shouldn't handle the matter, she added.

Marvin Breslow, senior member, said that if there is an issue in who should have control of the Queen election, the Council should take it.

Proposed amendments to the Tassels constitution were offered by Miss Tucker, which would give that group definite control of the election. Their control over the election is presently in their by-laws, and not in their constitution.

The Tassels would have an open meeting asking for suggestions, Breslow said, and would then present proposed amendments to their constitution giving them the election.

"The Tassels should listen with an open mind," Breslow added, "which apparently they don't have any more."

Miss Deepe said that the question is not if the Council will delegate authority on the matter, but if they have authority.

The amendments to their constitution that Tassels will submit to the Council are:

1. The Homecoming Queen candidates shall all be junior active members of Tassels.

2. These girls shall be selected on the basis on interest and enthusiasm, service and leadership to the organization and the campus.

3. All junior actives' names shall be placed in nomination for Homecoming Queen candidates. The five girls receiving the highest number of Tassel votes will automatically become the five finalists.

4. The Queen shall then be chosen by a vote of the student body.

"This is our present method, and we will be glad to insert it into our constitution if the Council so desires," Tassels added.

Reasons given by Tassels as to why they should keep control of the Queen election were:

1. It has become a traditional part of the group's activities.

2. Tassels are representative of the entire campus. All organized women's houses, as well as unaffiliated girls, have representatives in Tassels.

3. Outstanding leaders appear among the candidates offered by Tassels.

4. It seems only fitting that the Queen should be chosen from the group responsible to large extent for work and the final success of many of the Homecoming activities.

5. This is one campus election where the candidates have really earned through their own efforts the right to be chosen.

6. It is due to an unusual situation this year that the candidates were selected from such a small number of junior actives — namely ten.

7. Tassels is more than a pep organization, and has assumed many other responsibilities of service to the University.

8. The votes cast in the election of the Queen are comparable in number to any other campus election.

In further Council business, Dick Andrews, Pub Board member announced that the resignation of Lucigrace Switzer, Nebraskan News Editor had been selected, and that the vacant position would not be filled this semester.

Bev Deepe reported that the Chancellor's Roundtable would be postponed until Nov. 28.

Dr. Crawford: Guest Lecturer To Speak

Dr. Bryce L. Crawford, Jr., chairman of the department of chemistry at the University of Minnesota, will be a guest lecturer at the University Monday.

He will discuss "Infrared Intensities" at the Nebraska Section of the American Chemical Society meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. in Room 324, Avery Laboratory.

Dr. Crawford holds the Presidential Certificate of Merit for his work in the development of rocket propellants during World War II. While on sabbatical leave in 1950-51, he held a Guggenheim Fellowship and a Fulbright visiting professorship at Oxford University, England.

Before moving to the University of Minnesota in 1940, he served on the faculties of Harvard and Yale Universities. He received his undergraduate and graduate training at Stanford University.

A dinner will be held for Dr. Crawford and section members and their wives at 6 p.m. Monday at the Student Union.

Co-ed Regulations: 'Point System' Limits Extra-Curricular Activity

With the time for campus elections approaching, University women are asked to keep the activity point system in mind when applying for offices pointed by the Associated Women Students, the AWS Board announced.

This system, which limits a girl's activity points to five, was established to aid girls by guiding their choice of extra-curricular activities. Last year the maintenance and enforcement of the activity point system for women was out of the hands of AWS and under consideration of the Student Council.

This year, however, it is function of the AWS Board. The point system was revised last Spring and the new list of pointed offices can be found in the 1956-57 AWS Rules and Regulations booklet.

If a girl acquires more than the maximum five points she may either drop a pointed activity or appeal her case to the Activity Point Appeal Board.

In considering an appeal case, the Board is interested in the girl's overall average, the type of pointed activity she wishes to carry, whether or not she holds an outside job, unpointed activities, such as honoraries, which she may be carrying, and her health.

The Appeal Board, composed of the AWS president, vice-president, point system chairman and her assistant, Miss Jevons, and Miss Mulvaney, is now functioning and each girl who appeals will be considered on an individual basis and in accordance with the purposes of the Point System.

She attempts to establish a school, over the objections of many members of the community and succeeds in finding one boy who shows great promise. The rest of the play deals with her struggle to retain the interest of the boy in his studies and see him through the university.
