Eudora Mallory:

NU Aide 43 Years Retires

Miss Eudora Mallory has retired after forty-three years as secretary and receptionist for six chancellors and two acting chancellors at the University.

Despite what some students may think, chancellors aren't all "cold fish," according to Miss Mallory. All of the chancellors she has known have been "kind, pleasant, and most thoughtful. There isn't a better type of person to work for," she added.

In a way, her association with the chancellors has been an academic education in small doses.

"I learned about chemistry from Chancellor Samuel Avery; agriculture from Chancellor E. A. Burnett; history from Chancellor C. S. Boucher; biochemistry from Chancellor R. G. Gustavson; business matters from Chancellor John K. Selleck; and agricultural economics from the present chancellor, Clifford M. Hardin."

Looking back through the years, Eudora feels that "the kids haven't changed a bit. They're the same year after year, cheerful and dedicated."

An ardent booster of the Cornhusker football and basketball team, she attends all the games but admits she doesn't know all the players' names. "I'm for the team because it's a Nebraska team and I hate to see them lose."

Eudora, as she's known to the University community, has watched the University grow from an enrollment of 2,300 to its present 8,500, from 230 faculty members to 645, and from a physical plant investment of $2.1 million to $26.5 million.

She has had a hand in every plan, watching it formulate and then develop. She listened to the problems of the faculty members and passed them on to the chancellor for solution.

Up until 1947, Eudora was the only other person besides the chancellor in the office. She answered all the phone calls, made the appointments, typed all the letters, speeches, and other material, and acted "in a way, as a dean of offices."

A native of Daykin, Eudora graduated from Table Rock High School in 1908. Later, she moved to Lincoln and attended the School of Music before becoming Chancellor Avery's secretary in 1913. Her interest in music has thrived at the University, for she has missed only a few music programs staged by the students. A pianist, she has accompanied many soloists and vocal groups in the Lincoln community.

Before the University grew to such proportions, she knew every faculty member personally. But, now she knows only their names and can put them in their proper places in respect to departments.

The darkest moment in the University's life during her service was the "charges against several German-born professors that they were disloyal to the country during World War I." However, the brightest moments, she recalled, occur each commencement day, "the youngsters get their diplomas and the show of pride on the faces of their parents."

Both former Chancellor Selleck and Chancellor Hardin paid tribute to Eudora's cheerfulness, and efficient, prompt, and courteous manner of handling the affairs of the office. "Mr. Selleck called attention particularly to her 'high integrity in handling confidential University matters.'"

As for the future, she is undecided, but hopes to rest up and keep on enjoying people. "Of course, I'm going to miss the professors and students. The University will still remain foremost in my thoughts and plans."

One of her close friends feels that she'll probably give more time to her church—Second Presbyterian Church—and continue her work with shut-ins, visiting them and taking them for drives.

The memory she'll always keep of the University will be "how wonderful all the people have been—the students, faculty, and public."

A record thirty-nine engagements, twelve marriages, and ten pinnings were announced Monday night. Because of the many announcements, some will have to be run in Wednesday's paper. Congratulations to the girls wearing their new diamonds and pins.

Coed Follies practices have cut into the week-end's social functions; so there is only one social function scheduled this week.

Dates Scheduled For Registration

Registration for second semester undergraduate students will be held Jan. 14-17 at the Military and Naval Science Building.

The time schedule for registration is as follows: Monday, Jan. 14 at 9:00 a.m. students having 100 or more hours on record as of Sept. 17, 1956, will begin registering. At 10:00 a.m. students with 95 hours, then at 1:00 p.m. those with 90 hours, at 2:00 p.m. students with 80 hours and at 3:00 p.m. those students who have 75 hours will register.

Beginning at 2:00 p.m. Jan. 16 Junior Division students will begin to register according to the time assigned them. Assignment cards, with the time indicated, were mailed to all Junior Division students in December, and they must bring these cards with them and present them at the door at the time indicated in order to be admitted to register. If students have lost these cards they may register on Jan. 17, from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

All students not in the Junior Division must bring their own worksheets with them when they come to register or they will not be admitted. Junior Division students will leave two copies of their worksheets with their advisers, who will send them to the Junior Division office for processing.

Beginning at 1:00 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 15, these worksheets will be brought to the Military and Naval Science Building where they will be given to Junior Division students when their number of hours or appointment time entitles them to register.

Any Junior Division student whose hours come up before Tuesday afternoon can go to the Junior Division office in Ellen Smith Hall to get his own worksheet.

All worksheets must have the adviser's signature. Except for Teachers College students carrying from 12 to 18 hours and Arts and Sciences students with from 12-17 hours, all students must obtain their dean's signature on their worksheets before coming to register.

Students registering for evening classes in the Extension Division in addition to daytime classes should have their advisers write these courses on the worksheet. The cards for these courses will be pulled along with the other class cards at the Military and Naval Science Building.

Fees will be payable for undergraduate students with last names beginning with letters A to G on Monday, Jan. 28; H to N on Tuesday, Jan. 29; and O to Z on Wednesday, Jan. 30.

Students who cannot pay their fees on the assigned day may either claim their registration and pay their fees with the addition of a late fee of $3.00 on Monday, Feb. 4 or arrange with a friend to whom they have given a check for the amount of their fees and a set of filled-out personal data cards to claim their registration for them and pay fees on the correct day. All payment of fees will be at the drill floor of the Military and Naval Science Building.

Students not completing registration on Jan. 14-17 can do so with the new students on Feb. 1. Students in the Graduate College and those working for an advanced professional degree in Teachers College will register from Feb. 1-16. Late fees for these students begin on Feb. 11.
