It happened at NU

A fraternity man who came home late last night was told to call a certain number and ask for Flo. A voice on the other end finally answered that it was Professor Snort's home. "Oh, I'm sorry sir, I was calling for Flo. Sorry to get you up."

"That's all right," the prof replied, "I had to get up to answer the phone, anyhow."

Book Pool Debut Set Next Week

The newly formed book pool committee will go into action by operating a booth in the Union on Jan. 17 and 18, where students may fill out a card on any book they wish to sell.

This card will have information such as department, course number, title of the book, the author, date of edition, the person's name, telephone number, address, hours he may be reached, conditions of the book, and the price he is asking for.

Helen Gourlay, chairman of the committee said, "Our committee will act as a contacting service or bureau of information."

These cards will be on file according to the course number and the files will be operated by the Student Council members.

Miss Gourlay said, "On Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 4 and 5, the first two days of second semester (or longer if necessary) a student may come in to see the cards for a certain course he wishes to buy a book for. Then he may personally contact the person who has indicated he wishes to sell that book and they will carry on their own transaction."

This system will be a go-between for students wishing to buy a book and students wishing to sell books, according to Gourlay.

The committee wishes in the future to operate a book exchange where students would actually bring in the books they wish to sell. This system is now operating at Colorado, and Missouri.

The council first learned of the idea from members who attended the Big-Seven Student Governor's Conference in Kansas City last year. Student book pools, which have been in effect in schools throughout the country for many years, have proved to be very successful. The large monetary saving for the books is the main reason for the pool's popularity among students.

The book pool would provide a means for students in a larger group than present organizations to buy and exchange books without going through a middle man.

The exchange would be operated by council members and volunteer students. The probable charge to students utilizing the service would be 10 or 20 cents.

Coed Follies Tryouts Schedules

Tryouts will be held Tuesday evening in the Union Ballroom for the 1957 Coed Follies presentation "Varsity Visions," Sara Hubka, Coed Follies chairman announced.

Five skits, three curtain acts and several traveler acts will be selected for the show which will be held March 4 and 5 at the Nebraska Theater.

Freshman women trying out must get special permission from their Housemother if they are to be out later than 9 p.m., Miss Hubka said.

In addition to the variety acts, the Ideal Nebraska Coed will be presented during the show. Each organized women's house will submit two INC candidates and the finalists will be selected by a committee composed of AWS members and faculty representatives.

Another highlight of the show will be the presentation of the twelve Cornhusker Yearbook Beauty Queens.

Assisting this year's Coed Follies chairman, Sara Hubka are Jan Kraus, Traveler Acts chairman; Nan Carlson, skitmaster; and Mary Houston, Program.

Last year's Coed Follies skit winner was Gamma Phi Beta. Delta Delta Delta won the curtain act competition and the winning traveler's act was presented by Shirley McPeck, Virginia McPeck and Kathy Carpenter.

'King Lear' Tryouts Next Week

Tryouts for the University Theater production of "King Lear" will be held in Room 312 of the Temple Building next week, according to Dallas Williams, director.

Tryout times are scheduled for Jan. 15 to 17 from 2-5 p.m. and from 7:30-10 p.m.

"The casting for this play will be exceptionally difficult," Williams said. "There are 10 to 12 extremely strong parts for men and at least three strong leads for women."

All regularly enrolled students are eligible to try out for the play, including graduate students, he stressed.

Plan Examined

JoAnn Gabarron (left) looks over the new University Health and Accident policy which will be available to students second semester with Ben Loudon, University Personnel and Information officer. The policy will be handled by the Mutual Health and Accident Company of Omaha. The first sale of the policy will begin with registrations next week.

'Pioneer' Project:

Low Cost Health, Accident Protection Available To Students Second Semester

An opportunity for students to participate in a pioneer insurance program is being offered at the University during second semester.

The University Administration drew up specifications for a health and accident coverage and submitted particulars to 35 insurance companies representatives.

Ben Loudon of the Administration office said Monday that the program was designed with the students' needs in mind and the lowest bid was offered by Mutual Health and Accident Company of Omaha.

"In other words," Loudon said, "we let major companies know what we were looking for to protect the students and the most acceptable bid was given by Mutual of Omaha."

In letters addressed to undergraduate students and mailed over the holidays Chancellor Hardin and Medical Director Dr. S. I. Fuenning, pointed out that the plan can be extended to the families of students covered.

The plan was developed to cover one hundred per cent of the medical expenses which might face students.

Loudon said that the Student Health Center protection is now primarily an out-patient service. "The policy as we have developed it, aids 'in' patients who are injured in intramurals and other accidents as well as long term illnesses."

The plan will cover students who are generally "in between" on family coverage plans. Ben Patterson of Mutual of Omaha stated that ordinarily students over 18 are out of the range of family policies.

"In addition," he said, "they

Parking:

Police Ask For Student Assistance

In a letter to Dave Keene, chairman of the University parking committee, Sgt. John Furrow, of the campus police, has urged "the student body, faculty, and the employees of the University" to cooperate with police officials by "not parking in the areas marked with red lines."

Furrow's letter was in reply to an inquiry by Keene concerning parking "on red lines and green lines throughout the campus area between the hours of 5 p.m. and 8 p.m."

"It appears that we must all recognize that redline areas are universally recognized as areas in which one may not park," the letter stated.

"While it is true that certain parking regulations on the University campus apply only during given hours, the restrictions with respect to red lines apply twenty-four hours a day," Furrow added.

Tuition:

Council To Poll Students

A motion to poll the student body after administrative consultation in regard to raising tuition rates was unanimously passed by the Student Council in their Wednesday meeting.

The resolution, introduced by council secretary Mary Huston, called for the Student Council to "discuss with the proper administrative authorities the possibility of conducting a survey of the University students during the Registration period to compile data concerning student status or need in the case of a tuition increase."

Bruce Brugmann, Council president, appointed a committee composed of Mary Huston, chairman; Jo Bender, Anne Pickett, Bob Schuyler and Dwaine Rogge to talk with administrative officials on the feasibility of such a poll.

In other Council action, a motion by parking board chairman Dave Keene to form a committee "to study a long-range parking program...made up of representatives of the Student Council, faculty and the committee on student affairs" was passed.

Keene stated that University officials are "concerned that there is no such committee investigating suggestions on the parking situation."

The administration wants a suggestion from the students themselves," Keene commented.

Dave Mossman, John Kinnier, and Dick Andrews gave reports on the Big 7 Student Council Convention held in Kansas City over Christmas vacation.

Commenting on the news coverage, Andrews stated that the Kansas City papers were "highly imaginative" in reporting the happenings of the conference.

"One of the Kansas City papers switched reporters in the middle of a discussion and the failure of the reporter to realize the full context of the discussions contributed to an unfortunate misrepresentation," Andrews said.

was a finalist for Honorary Commandant at this year's Military Ball. Linda is a senior with a major in Home Economics. She has been elected to Omicron Nu, national home economics honorary and recently received the Ayres Advertising Scholarship for outstanding scholastic achievement.

Dr. Broady, the Director of the Department of extension, is the first faculty nominee. Since 1941, when Dr. Broady was appointed to his present position, the University extension service has grown into one of the most modern and complete services of its kind in a state university. In addition to his efforts as extension director, Dr. Broady has found time to serve on education a surveys throughout the country.

The letter nominating Broady stated, "Dr. Broady has served this University selflessly and loyally for 27 years. Throughout the nation and the world, he has brought the highest type of recognition to his school."

Dr. Lloyd Weaver, Acting Chairman of the Botany Department and advisor to the Innocents Society is the last nominee. His interest and willingness to accept responsibility have been such that he has earned the affectionate title of "the advisor to everything."

Last semester, Gail Katskee and Dr. Carl Georgi were selected as the Outstanding Nebraskans of the semester.

Freezing Air, Possible Snow Predicted

Keep your coats on and your galoshes handy because the Weather Bureau says it will continue to be cloudy and cold and possible snow storms are feared.

Highs in the state Friday will be between 15 and 20 above with lows around zero.

Crop statistician A. V. Nordquist said Thursday that the snow which paralyzed parts of the state was not sufficient to help the drought stricken winter crops.

"The sub-zero temperatures didn't help the winter wheat, either. Any way you look at it, Nebraska still needs moisture but the frigid temperatures might just as well stay way up north."
