Committee Slates Debate On Tuition

Proposals to triple tuition at the state normal schools and double it at the University are scheduled for public hearing Tuesday afternoon by the Education Committee of the State Legislature.

The hearings are open to the public and any interested person may attend, according to Senator Don Thompson of McCook, head of the committee.

Senator Terry Carpenter introduced the bills. LB 409 would triple the tuition at the normal schools to $240 and $120 per semester for non-Nebraskans and Nebraskans respectively. At the present time the fee is $60 per semester for in-state students and $10 more for outsiders.

LB 410 would double the tuition at the University to $36 per semester for non-Nebraskans and $180 for Nebraskans.

Approval of the bills would represent a departure from present policy under which the Board of Regents sets the University tuition and the State Normal Board sets the rates at the normal schools. Both of these bodies have committees studying the tuition problem.

Both boards are expected to object to the bills.

Agitation for increased tuition developed after the University asked for a 5 1/2 million budget increase.

Administration Replies To Mitchell's Charges

Closed Hearing Scheduled On Controversial Case

Four members of the University administration have responded to charges made by Dr. C. Clyde Mitchell, former professor of agricultural economics and chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics.

Those responding to Dr. Mitchell's allegations were Chancellor Hardin, Dean of Faculties A. C. Breckenridge, Dean W. V. Lambert of the College of Agriculture, and J. E. Selleck, University business manager.

A closed hearing of the University Faculty Committee on Privilege and Tenure will be held at 2:30 p.m., Feb. 21, in room 107, Law Building. The hearing will not be open to the press, David Dow, chairman of the faculty committee stated.

The pending case of Mitchell before the Committee on Academic Privilege and Tenure, involves the charges of Dr. Mitchell that his academic freedom has been violated.

Mitchell called for an investigation into the specific causes of his removal from the chairmanship of the agricultural economics department.

The first hint of the possible demotion of Dr. C. Clyde Mitchell from his position as chairman of the department of agricultural economics came on April 12, 1956.

Rumors reached the Nebraskan that the decision, called "irrevocable and final" had been announced at a staff meeting of the department of agricultural economics held shortly before spring vacation. Persons in attendance said the demotion was due to "outside pressures" which were not clearly defined at the meeting.

On April 17 the rumor was confirmed when W. V. Lambert, Dean of the College of Agriculture, announced after consultation with the Chancellor that a successor to Mitchell was being sought.

The reason given by Lambert was "to strengthen beyond present levels the research and extension programs in agricultural economics." The Dean denied that his decision involved Dr. Mitchell's tenure.

The Nebraskan wrote to many outside sources concerning the issue. Returns indicated a high degree of confidence in Mitchell's ability. Certain professors previously connected with the University indicated that the stand of the Nebraskan that the removal was a moral violation of academic freedom was in part true and that similar situations existed in other colleges of the University.

On May 15, the Chancellor issued a statement in which he denied that the University had in any case violated the spirit of the principles of academic freedom.

On May 23, Mitchell issued a special statement to the Nebraskan saying his academic freedom had been violated. In six points, he claimed that repeated attempts had been made to "tone down, modify and even to censor my publications." He said he was advised "to resign my position and move elsewhere, assured that I would never get a salary increase, and that I was on the Regents blacklist." He maintained that "In Feb. 1955, because of continued controversy over my views, I was told that I was going to be relieved of my chairmanship."

It was reported on Dec. 14 that Dr. Mitchell was not planning to return to Lincoln to appear before the Senate Committee on Academic Tenure and Privilege, but that he would inform David Dow when he made his final decision.

The unconfirmed report said that Mitchell might be able to get leave from his present job, working with the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization in Mexico City, in February.

First Hungarian Student Thinks English 'Difficult To Learn'; Likes University

By CAROLE FRANK Copy Editor

Sara Laszlo, the University's first Hungarian refugee student, is a charming 20-year-old girl, who is very eager to learn English.

For a girl who has only studied our language for three weeks at Bard College in New York, Sara is quick to pick up English words.

She can understand her instructors and is able to converse slowly in English with others.

Sara carries an English-Hungarian dictionary with her at all times to look up words she doesn't understand. She thinks our language "is very difficult to learn".

Attending school in Dunaszentgyorgy, Hungary, she studied chemical engineering with other Hungarian and Russian students.

Before escaping over the border to Austria, Sara participated in the demonstrations. She later escaped with her cousin and his family during the night without her parents' knowledge. Her parents are still in Hungary.

Sara came to the United States by plane from Austria and stayed

"I was treated nicely and liked the camp very much", Sara said in an interview Monday. From New York she took a train to Lincoln. To the question, which did she enjoy the best, she answered, "the plane".

She is very happy with International House and believes the University students are "very friendly".

Second Hungarian To Arrive Tuesday

The University's second Hungarian refugee student is to arrive in Lincoln Tuesday night.

Karoly (Charles) Nemeth will be met by members of the University Hungarian Student Project committee, which has raised funds to bring him here to study.

Nemeth, 26, is a native of Acts Komarom Megye, Hungary. The resettlement agency sponsoring him is Church World Service.

He plans to take pre-medical courses at the University and will live at Cornhusker Co-op, men's cooperative house.

ly". Sara is taking seven hours of Speech, English and Physical Education at the University and it is hoped she is able to carry a full load next semester. She will continue studying chemical engineering then.

Her favorite foods are hot dogs, ice cream and potatoes. To the question whether she enjoyed U.S. movies, she replied, "I couldn't understand them".

Sara plans to become a US citizen and will take out her citizenship papers in the near future. She would like to visit Hungary but not to live there again.

Sara is very excited about meeting the second Hungarian student, Karoly (Charles) Nemeth, who will arrive tonight at 6:40 p.m. at the Burlington Station.

Plans for Spring vacation for Sara have already been taken care of by the Mortar Board's Foreign Student's Tour through Nebraska and a visit with Barbara Sharpe in Omaha.
