

On The Social Side: Social Life Slows Down

There is very little social news this week. The start of a new semester always slows down campus night-life because the students are too busy getting acclimated to

Democrats Predicted 1960 Victors

(ACP) — Some people hold the opinion it is President Eisenhower as an individual who swept the Republican party into administrative office in the past two elections. This belief, plus the fact that the people have elected a Democratic Senate and House in the last election, lead many individuals to the point where they predict a Democratic presidential victory in 1960.

Associated Collegiate Press attempting to get an idea of collegiate opinion on this issue by asking the following question of a representative national cross-section of college students:

Since President Eisenhower will not be able to run for president in 1960, which party do you think will win the 1960 presidential election?

	Men	Women	Total
Republican	16%	9%	13%
Democratic	56%	53%	51%
Undecided	34%	38%	36%

The figures indicate substantial support for the belief the Democrats will win out, with correspondingly little support for the Republicans. A very sizeable proportion of the students are still undecided on the issue.

Students holding the opinion the Democrats will win have two major reasons for their belief. Many feel the Republican party lacks leaders with the appeal Eisenhower had; many add that Nixon is not too well-liked and could not win. And many feel the Democratic trend of Senate and House elections indicates a further Democratic boom. Others feel the Democratic party is the most popular party, or that it has more young leaders, etc. Here are several typical comments:

"Eisenhower won on personal popularity and I don't think the Republicans will be able to beat some of the top Democrats like Williams, Kefauver, etc." is the opinion of a sophomore attending the Bernard Baruch School of Business, City College of New York. "I don't think the Republicans have another who can pull votes the way Eisenhower did," is the way an Ohio University (Athens) senior puts it. And a University of Arkansas (Fayetteville) freshman coed simply says: "The Republicans don't have a good candidate." Another freshman coed, but at Christian College (Columbia, Mo.), has this to say: "The overwhelming majority of the Senate and House in the 1956 election shows what will happen." But a freshman attending Jacksonville University (Jacksonville, Florida) looks at it this way: "The Democratic party has many up and coming leaders, whereas the Republicans don't have much left to follow Ike."

Students feeling the Republicans will win the presidential election in 1960 have a variety of ideas supporting their opinions. The following remarks are representative of most of these ideas:

"If prosperity continues for the next four years, then the Republicans will win," is the belief of a Lynchburg College (Lynchburg, Va.) sophomore coed, while a freshman coed attending Oswego State Teachers College (Oswego, N. Y.) feels the "people have more faith in the Republican party." "An era of goodwill has been created within the country; the Republican administration will get credit for Senate and House policies," is how a junior at the Baruch School of Business looks at it.

A University of Nebraska senior says: "The Republicans have been gaining in popularity and the balance of power will probably swing completely to their side, barring any unforeseen developments." While a Rochester Institute of Technology junior coed states: "Their candidates and campaigns are cleaner and better qualified." And a Yakima Valley Junior College (Yakima, Wash.) freshman simply says: "I'm sure they will find a strong man."

Students undecided on this question can easily be lumped into one group, well represented by the statement of a graduate student attending Villanova University (Villanova, Pa.): "Neither candidate of this year will run in 1960. It depends on the candidates, the situation in our country and abroad, and on the job the parties do in congress."

There are four house-parties scheduled this week-end: a date dinner, a formal, a pledge party, and a house dance.

Five engagements and five pinning were announced Monday night.

Linotype Drops T's From Story

As some people noticed yesterday, a story appearing on page four was minus all the T's. His was due to a drop in the linotype machine. Our apologies go to the Garth James family and to all our readers who caught the error. It is encouraging to the members of the Daily Nebraskan staff to see the unusual number of students who read the last page.

One-Fourth: World University Service Gets $2500

This is the first article in the series "Where Your Money Went," concerning contributions collected by the All University Fund. The articles will explain each charity AUF donated to this year, and the various purposes the organization serves.

By LINDA WALT
AUF Assistant

Approximately $2500 was given to the World University Service this year as a result of last fall's All University Fund drive. This is about 25 per cent of AUF's total budget.

WUS aids students and faculty members in under-developed and war torn countries through a program of mutual assistance.

Funds contributed by student and faculty members will be used for medical aid, maintenance of rest centers, aid to refugee students, cooperative housing, educational supplies, scholarships and emergency food and clothing.

In past years WUS has aided student refugees in France and Germany, provided medical care for students in Greece, Burma and Indonesia, sent books and equipment to university centers in Pakistan, Japan and Korea, and established scholarships and loan funds in India and Africa.

WUS is a fellowship of thirty-five national committees co-ordinated by an international secretariat in Geneva. It is based on the belief that only through partnership can a real fellowship among students be created. The activities of WUS are directed toward helping the student in his own country to become a leader of his nation tomorrow.

Besides contributing to WUS, an international organization, AUF gave to two national organizations, the American Cancer Society and the Cerebral Palsy association. Two local organizations, the Lincoln Community Chest and the Lancaster Association for Retarded Children, were also supported by AUF.
