Mitchell: Committee Hearing Set Thursday

A hearing will be conducted to hear testimony concerning the charges by Dr. C. Clyde Mitchell, former chairman of the University department of agricultural economics, that his academic privilege was violated.

The University committee on academic privilege and tenure will meet at 2:30 p.m. in a closed session to hear from persons who desire to appear before the group. University officials headed by Chancellor Hardin have already met with the committee.

The meeting will be closed to the public and press and will be conducted in an informal manner. Cross-examination of witnesses will be kept so that witnesses may challenge allegations made at the hearings.

Dr. Mitchell was relieved of his position as department head last spring. He is presently associated with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in Mexico City. Dr. Mitchell has not returned to the campus since he left for Mexico although he has submitted an extensive report to the committee regarding his position.

Diet Study: Students' Efficiency Related To Food

By FRED DALY
Editor

A study made a few years ago by Dr. Ruth Levenson of the University home economics department indicated that a student's efficiency is directly related to his diet.

Dr. Levenson said that most students do not actually suffer from malnutrition but that many of the students do not always eat the best of food necessary to a good diet.

This study by Dr. Levenson opens vast fields of research on the present student diet, in itself often a strange and wondrous thing.

Students living in organized houses or dorms generally have ample and balanced meals. They may complain long and loud about french-fried ham-and-cheese on alternate Tuesdays, but generally they wax fat and sleek.

Students living in apartments or rooming houses have a different problem, as often they must take their meals in restaurants. Still, with a little judicious planning, they get along.

Where the real wonder of the thing comes in is in the extra-curricular diets most students develop as they pursue knowledge and the like.

The staple, of course, is coffee, the world's greatest nerve energizer. The academic ball bearings of this and any other college are lubricated by that evil bean.

From the staple, usually found in the Crib, the diet plan fans out. There is the carefully-planned mid-afternoon repast of the tavern-inhabitor, consisting of peanuts, hotdogs and potatoe chips. This makes one thirsty, of course, calling for more ale, and thus more peanuts.

On a less vicious scale is the diet of the actual dieter, who shuns about everything at regular meal times and fills up on pizza and reuben sandwiches after dark. It is like a disease.

One of the main sources of extralegal eating is home itself. Mother takes pity on her poor fledgling and sends down a tidy box of chocolate cake, cookies, beer cheese, crackers, lemons, apple pie and a small ham. This is to tide poor fledgling over from meal to meal, until he looks like a balloon someone forgot to stop blowing up.

And last, of course, is that social leech, the cheese-dipper. Upon arriving at a party he steers his date and himself to the hors-d'oeuvre table and eats his way happily to a gastric ulcer. He can be spotted by the potato chip crumbs in his cuffs and a faint tang of garlic.

Such is a brief survey of that most wondrous of things, the student's stomach. An army is said to travel on its stomach, while a student seems to travel in spite of his.

The Outside World: Army Program 'No Good'

The top spokesman for the National Guard told Congress Monday the Army's six month reserve training program has been a failure and that imposing it on the Guard would be "the kiss of death." Maj. Gen. Ellard Walsh, president of the National Guard Association gave a House Armed Services Subcommittee the Guard's arguments against six months active duty for new recruits under 18½. Heretofore, the Guard has required no extended active duty of its new enlistees. It has now said it would agree to six months duty for those over 18½ and 11 weeks for younger recruits.

A fire in an old peoples home in Warrentown Missouri has cost an estimated 71 lives. The fire raged through the two and one-half story building in a matter of minutes. The operator of the home said he had no idea what caused the fire. Authorities were reported to be "puzzled."

The Legislature voted to take "a deliberate look" at all legislation involving state property tax money. The senators approved a motion to have the Legislative Council make a complete report on all legislation that would require $5,000 or more per year increase in property tax funds. Apparently the sales tax is a dead issue. Senator Terry Carpenter from Scottsbluff, who earlier supported the sales tax said, "I will not vote again for a sales tax and this is no gimmick or scheme on my part."

Playwright Arthur Miller, husband of actress Marilyn Monroe, was indicted on two charges of contempt of Congress. The indictment stemmed from Miller's refusal to tell the House Committee on Un-American Activities the names of fellow writers with whom he admitted attending Communist party meetings in 1943.

Davidson College: Revisions Suggested For Degrees

Revision of the traditional distinction between bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees at Davidson College, Davidson, N.C. appears headed for a decision.

Two possible alternatives to the present classical language requirements are offered by members of both the Executive and Curriculum Committees.

One plan would give degrees in science only to majors in Biology, Chemistry, Physics and Mathematics, with majors in all other subjects receiving the arts degree. Another suggestion proposes arts degrees for all students regardless of major field.

Both plans specify that they would go into effect this year and would apply to the present junior and senior classes. The first proposal mentioned above includes a provision that for any student who qualifies for two different degrees under the old, and newly-proposed requirements, that student would have his choice of degrees.

Another specification, suggested in some quarters, is that the name of the department of major work also appears on the diploma.

One of the major changes is the requirement that those in the business teacher and secretarial sequences take a three-credit course in secretarial problems and procedures. Students in the two sequences are also now required to take a three-credit course in office machines.

There has been expanded a course in dealing with elementary business (statistics) and also expanded was the course in business correspondence to include all aspects of business application.

According to the head of the Business Education Department, Dr. Vance Littlejohn, the new courses in the merchandising program combined with already existing courses make it possible for non-majors to obtain a solid background within the 12-hour limit allowed the non-major.
