NRA: Population Increases Ag Demand

The president of the National Reclamation Association charged in Lincoln Friday afternoon that the critics of the reclamation program "do not realize the demand on agriculture which is being brought about by the ever increasing population."

Guy Jackson of Anahuac, Tex., told the Nebraska Water Conference at the University, that "these critics talk long and loud about 'surpluses,' when in truth and fact they are 'reserves.'"

He said these "reserves" are needed by us to keep our dominant position in this world of nations the same as a reserve of airplanes, guns, ammunitions, and tanks.

The concluding speaker at the two-day conference, Mr. Jackson explained that during the past 35 years, there has been no material increase in the total crop land acreage in the U.S.

"Lands brought into production during that period through reclamation, drainage, and clearing have been approximately offset by lands that have gone out of production due to withdrawal to non-agricultural uses, erosions, and deterioration."

He reported that good land is being taken out of agricultural production at the rate of about 1,800,000 acres per year.

Jackson sees a complete balance of supply and demand by 1962, "even with the improved seeds, farming methods, and fertilizers together with the substitution of motor power in lieu of horse and mule power."

He continued: "Some of the new agricultural land needed for our growing population will come from the 17 western states. The primary limiting factor is availability of water, so we must learn to conserve and use every gallon."

Jackson pointed out that the primary and ultimate purpose of reclamation is irrigation—"nothing but that."

But, he added, "reclamation can survive only with the help of revenue derived from a by-product function—the generation of hydro-electric power."

"Without that incidental source of by-product revenue, reclamation could not continue and the resultant effects upon the economy of the western half of the U.S. would be incalculable but disastrous."

Final 'Pot Luck'

Health Coverage:

NU Students 'Okay' Insurance Program

Student opinion on the new health insurance program put into operation at the University this semester is favorable, according to a straw vote taken by the Daily Nebraskan.

The plan was developed to cover 100 per cent of the medical expenses which might face students. The bid by Mutual Health and Accident Company of Omaha was accepted by the University administration, according to Ben Loudon, personnel and information officer.

The University's policy protects students normally "in between" on family coverage plans, and will be a definite help to young married students since coverage can be extended to include the immediate family, according to Ben Patterson of Mutual of Omaha.

Ordinarily students over 18 are out of the range of family policies, he added.

Most of the students interviewed by the Daily Nebraskan thought the low cost of the program its best feature. "The price is right," said a senior engineering student.

Others thought the insurance program will cover accidents and illnesses they would not normally be protected against.

At least one fraternity has urged its members participating in intramural athletics to take out policies. A number of others are planning to do the same.

One woman student, a sophomore in Teachers College, thought the plan "a very sound idea," but said she already had similar coverage in a regular policy.

"If it weren't for that I'd take it," she said. This was the same circumstance with a few other students.

A junior in Arts and Sciences said he had taken out a policy partly because he was "accident prone," and partly because the

Ex-President In Omaha:

Reporter Quizzes Truman; Says 'In Favor Of Federal School Aid'

By C.ROLE FRANK Copy Editor

"I am in favor of federal aid for all colleges and universities and hope to see this granted in the near future," said former President of the United States, Harry Truman in an exclusive interview with The Daily Nebraskan.

Mr. Truman has a steadfast policy of never granting private interviews but decided to make an exception in this case because it was for a student newspaper.

When asked the question, "Should 18-year-olds be allowed to vote?" he replied, "In my opinion 18-year-olds should not be allowed to vote until they have reached the age of 21 because too many of them lack the ability to vote intelligently before that age."

He qualified this statement by stating "All students should attain as much knowledge as possible during their college career. If they are specializing in certain fields, students should take advantage of the great opportunities available to them today so they will become better citizens in the future."

At the scheduled press conference later in the presidential suite at the Sheraton-Fontenelle Hotel in Omaha, Mr. Truman was asked pertinent questions pertaining to events of national importance by local and national news agencies.

When asked his opinion of the present foreign policy, he cleverly evaded the direct question by answering, "Every president has his own idea of how foreign policy should be conducted, and he will not be influenced otherwise."

"Has the prestige of the United States suffered because of the Middle East situation?" was another question asked of the former president. His answer was "It is too bad the situation had to occur because today the Middle East is the seat of the greatest tension in the world. The United Nations can only be as strong as its members, is essential and has to be supported to keep peace in the world."

His reply to the question of "What are the Democratic presidential chances in 1960?" was "Congress will always be democratic regardless of what party is in office."

The Former President was guest of honor Sunday at the Fifth Annual Citation Dinner given by the Beth Israel Synagogue, where he was named its "Man of the Year." According to the citation, tribute was being paid to the "Honorable Harry S. Truman whose dedicated efforts on behalf of American and Israel have secured for him an imperishable niche in history's Hall of Fame."

University Operation To Cost $11.5 Million

By BEV BUCK Special Writer

Eleven and one-half million dollars are being spent during the 1956-57 school year for the general operation of the University, according to Edward Hirsch, assistant director of Public Relations.

The tuition and fees that students pay amount to $1,400,000 of this operational cost, he said.

Approximately $8,900,000 of the money spent comes from state appropriations. Federal support totals $1,125,000.

Hirsch explained that $60 of the resident students' $90 semester payment is for tuition; the remaining $30 pays his fees.

additions to the Union, $1 goes to the Daily Nebraskan, $6.50 is used for the operation of Student Health, $5 is for the new Student Health building and $6.50 is used for laboratory and library expenses.

If students' payments were raised, Hirsch said, the increase would be in the tuition, not the fees. The additional money would go into the general operation fund, which pays the salaries of all University personnel—faculty, administrators and anyone employed by the University. This money is also used for minor building repairs and equipment.

In 1947 the state legislature passed a 1.1 mill institutional building levy to be levied for ten years. The ten-year period ends this year; fees. The additional money would have received $13 million for new buildings.
