

Proposed Med Buildings

The first full construction of units for medical education at the University's College of Medicine will be built in stages according to official sources.

The structure, when completed, will contain an outpatient clinic, laboratories, radiology, medical records, classrooms and an office area for the clinical staff. No bed areas will be included in the unit. The building will not be constructed at one time, but in stages, floor by floor, as money becomes available. Due to lack of funds the unshaded section at the right which represents an auditorium will not be included in present building plans. Any construction on campus depends on the continuance of the one-fourth mill levy, the school said.

University High will serve as the meeting place for the women and they will be housed in the girls dormitories.

Dr. Harriet O'Shea, associate professor of psychology at Purdue University, will be on hand to act as consultant for the entire duration of the convention.

The AFCW membership originally started with twenty-three schools in 1917 but has grown to approximately 300 member schools today. Colleges and universities from almost every state in the Union are represented in AFCW.

Dr. Julius Stone: Roscoe Pound Lecturer Discusses Aggression

An authority on international law said Monday evening that he felt the task of fixing rule-of-thumb tests for the act of aggression is a "vain one, and also one that embarrasses rather than assists the tasks of peace enforcement."

Dr. Julius Stone of University of Sydney, Australia, delivered at the University the first in a series of three Roscoe Pound Lectures, under the general title of Aggression in International Law.

He then explained that the problem of defining aggression has received the attention of international lawyers for more than 30 years.

He pointed out that the vast legal powers of the Security Council and such powers as the general assembly may have in this regard can all be activated under Chapter VII by any "threat to the peace, or breach of the peace" as well as by an act of aggression.

And the latest attempt at the solution came to "another frustrating end in November, 1956," at the 19th meeting of the United Nations' special committee of the General Assembly.

He said the committee's failure is noteworthy because at the time it was deliberating the problem: Israeli forces crossed the Gaza and Sinai frontiers to eliminate raiders; the British and French governments partly carried out an air-borne invasion of the Suez Canal Zone; and events occurred which led to intervention of Soviet forces to displace the Nagy regime in Hungary.

The Australian professor said that international lawyers in seeking a definition must first find a verbal means of distinguishing in advance between that use which may be justified (legitimate self-defense) from that use of force which is to be condemned and repressed as a supreme crime.

"Such a delimitation is not always easy to make, even as between individuals within a society," he pointed out.

Dr. Stone doubted that an advance set of criteria for defining aggression was of major importance for the system of peace enforcement under the United Nations' Charter.

Dr. Stone pointed out that the difficulties of bringing home a charge of aggression, however defined, are far greater than those involved in proof merely of a "Threat to the peace" or a "breach of the peace."

"Either of these more modest holdings would give ample powers for collective enforcement or peace, so far as a definition can give such power."

Dr. Stone, authority on international law, will give the Roscoe Pound Lectures Tuesday and Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Love Library Auditorium. The lectures have the general title of "Aggression in International Law" and the subtitles are as follows: Tuesday, "Obstacles to Definition"; Wednesday, "The Aggression Notion and the Future of Peace Enforcement."

The lectures are sponsored jointly by the College of Law and members of the Pound Lectureship Committee.

Dr. Stone, Challis Professor of Jurisprudence and International Law at the University of Sydney in Australia, is for the current academic year Visiting Bernis Professor of International Law at Harvard University.

He is the author of eight books, several of which are concerned with international law.

Student Representatives: Report Recommends Procedure Change

By BOB IRELAND News Editor The Faculty Senate Committee on Committees will recommend to the Senate Tuesday a change in the present procedure of selecting student representatives on Faculty committees.

In a special report to the Senate, the committee on committees will suggest that "the Student Council will nominate to the Chancellor two students from the student body... from which nominates the Chancellor may make the necessary appointments."

Other items on business on the Faculty Senate Agenda Tuesday are: 1. Report of the Committee on General Scholarship Awards. 2. Report of the Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics.

The current method of selecting student members on faculty committees calls for the president of the Student Council to make the selections subject to the Council's approval.

Donald Dysinger, professor of psychology and chairman of the committee explained Monday that the recommendation in no way limits student representation but rather is concerned only with establishing a definite policy.

At that time Chancellor Clifford Hardin called the situation "so serious that I do not wish to comment until I have had an opportunity to meet with the Board of Regents."

Dysinger stated that his group is studying each faculty committee and its membership separately and will make further reports.

Further recommendations that the faculty committee on committees will make today include:

Monday, the Daily Nebraskan contacted several faculty members for their opinions on the proposed cut.

(1) The Committee on Student Affairs be dropped as a Senate Committee and be re-constituted as a University Committee on Student Affairs, in accordance with the By-Laws and Rules of the Board of Regents.

Frank Hallgren, Associate Dean of Student Affairs said, "It's a very critical situation. You catch me unawares because it is not a situation with which I deal."

Harry Weaver, Associate Professor of Botany and acting head of the Botany Department, commented, "My reaction closely parallels that of the University. The situation is serious but we'll just have to go along as best we can. We are still here but as time goes on, I think we will find the Chancellor has not exaggerated our situation any."

(2) The present committees on Commencement and Honors Convocation be dropped as Senate Committees and re-organized as a University Committee.

James Blackman, Associate Professor of Engineering Mechanics and Secretary of the Faculty Senate, stated, "I don't have much of an opinion about it because I don't know much. I am sure if the University is cut short we will have difficulty carrying on at our present level."

"I am very concerned about our legislative situation right now. I hope that the students won't take an antagonistic view of our legislature," Blackman continued.

(3) The Senate Committee on Committees be required to define to the Chancellor, on his request, the areas of responsibility of these University committees as well as the membership of each; and make nominations of faculty members to fill vacancies on such committees in the same manner as senate committees.

Mary Jean Mulvaney, Assistant Professor of Physical Education

Clair Harper, Director of the University Services and Treasurer of the Student Activities Fund, commented, "I would hope that when the budget matter gets on the floor of the Legislature they might to a little better by us."

(4) These University Committees shall be directly responsible to the Chancellor, but shall make an annual report to the University Senate for informational purposes.

In a letter to the Student Council, which was read on March 13 by President Bruce Brugmann, Dysinger requested the group "formulate a suitable procedure for nominations" of student representatives on faculty committees.

Dysinger went on to say that there was "some sentiment among the members of the committee that students serving as voting members of the Senate committees should represent the entire student body."

Brugmann, in a prepared statement, stated in the March 15 issue of the Nebraskan:

"Authority for the Council to appoint its members (a well defined cross section of University students) to the student-faculty committees has been established by many years of precedent and the Council Constitution, approved only a few years ago by the entire student body, the Faculty Senate and the Board of Regents. Article 2 to the Constitution postulates that the Council is to 'serve as an agency through which faculty-student relationships may be maintained.'"

Letters of appreciation have been received by the All University Fund from the five charities to which AUF donated the funds from the 1956 drive, according to Art Weaver, AUF president.
