Mable Lee: Professor Awarded Graduate Fellowship

By BOB GRIMM
Staff Writer

Mable Lee, professor emerita of physical education at the University, has been awarded a graduate fellowship by Wellesley College in Wellesley, Mass. Miss Lee was awarded the Amy Morris Homans Fellowship in Physical Education for the 1957-58 academic year.

As a fellowship holder, Miss Lee intends to write a book of professional memoirs which should prove valuable to the physical education profession as well as to the field of education in general. Miss Lee's book will cover her experiences during the last 50 years, with emphasis on promotion of girls' sports in America.

Miss Lee retired from her position as head of the Women's Physical Education Department in 1952. She had been at the University since 1924, when she came to Lincoln to become the head of the department.

Under Miss Lee, the whole women's physical education system was reorganized, and since then, the department has become very well known.

At the present time Miss Lee is revising a book on the history of physical education in America. After she finishes revising this book for the publishers, she will begin work on her professional memoirs.

Miss Lee is the past president of the National Association of Physical Education for Women. She was the first woman to be elected president of two national physical education associations; the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation and the American Academy for Physical Education.

Since the late 1930's, Miss Lee has been listed in Who's Who in America, and she will be listed in the first edition of Who's Who of American Women.

When she retired in 1952, Miss Lee went to Baghdad for the State Department, and she spent one year there as a consultant to the ministry of education. After her year in Baghdad, she spent a year traveling in Europe and spending a well earned vacation.

Miss Lee has written numerous articles for periodicals, and before she retired, she had two books published. She is also the holder of two honorary doctorate degrees.

Leave Of Absence: Zimmerman To Assist In German Construction

Dr. Edward Zimmerman, associate professor of physics at the University, has accepted an invitation to assist in the construction of a six-billion volt electron accelerator at Hamburg, Germany.

A similar accelerator—to be the largest of its kind in the world—is also being built in the U.S. jointly by Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard University.

Dr. Zimmerman said the Hamburg group will work closely with the M.I.T.-Harvard project members.

The University's Board of Regents Tuesday afternoon approved a year's leave for Dr. Zimmerman, starting next September, so that he may participate in the project.

Dr. Zimmerman said the accelerators are important because "they have sufficient energy to produce a number of 'strange' new particles, including the recently discovered anti-proton, which are otherwise found only in cosmic radiation."

He said most physicists believe that in these new particles will be found the key to the next important development of physical theory.

Other leaves of absence approved by the Regents Tuesday included: Dr. Clarence Flick, assistant professor of speech, radio and television, for one year from Sept. 1, 1957. He has received one of 20 Mass Media Leadership Training awards from the Fund for Adult Education. He will do research at the University of California on network broadcasting. Reginald A. H. Robson, assistant professor of legislation, for one year from Sept. 1, 1957. He received a law and behavioral science fellowship from the University of Chicago.
