Dr. Gustavson has headed the Resources for the Future, Inc., since July, 1953, when he resigned as chancellor of the University after six years of service.

Gustavson's six years at the University were spent in promoting the program of the University, and appearing before the State legislature with requests for increasing the budget.

At the suggestion of Gustavson, the first University Athletic Banquet was held to honor all participating lettermen.

Other "firsts" during his career as chancellor were the Honors Banquet for recognition of senior students for superior scholarship, and the all non-academic employees dinner.

He also worked with the Board of Regents in making it possible for the faculty members to have greater participants in University affairs and policies.

Enrollment Problems: Study Asked On Entrants

Study Asked On Entrants

A resolution which proposes a Legislative Council study of questions posed by the increasing college enrollments in Nebraska and the anticipated shortage of college-level teachers has been introduced in the Unicameral by three state senators.

The resolution was introduced by Senators Willard Waldo of Kearney and Arnold Ruhke of Plymouth.

Some of the questions proposed for study are:

1. Should enrollments at the University and state teachers colleges continue on an unrestricted basis?

2. If admissions continue unrestricted, how shall the cost of meeting the national competition for adequate faculty be met and how shall adequate physical facilities be provided?

3. Should junior colleges be brought into the system of state supported higher education and if so, on a wholly subsidized basis.

4. Should tuition charged by the state schools be increased?

5. Is there a duplication of services existing within the University or the four state colleges?

The resolution noted that Nebraska's birthrate has increased 55 per cent since 1942, and that more high school graduates are going on to college.

One of the resolution's introducers Senator Otto said Friday that the senators "should have an overall view of the needs of educational institutions and of their future needs." He also noted that we "need a good look into the future." If the resolution passes, a committee of state senators will be appointed to study these questions Otto stated. The committee will then report its findings to the next Legislature session.

Cornhusker To Undergo Minor Changes

The Cornhusker Yearbook for 1958 will have some revisions in procedure and make-up, according to Bev Buck, editor.

A new intensive training program will start for all new section heads of the Cornhusker as soon as they are announced. The program will stress copywriting, picture taking and general orientation.

The new section heads will work over the summer organizing their section instead of working in September. In September a review session then will be held for all section heads. This year the past staff members will orientate the new staff members.

Another change in the 1958 Cornhusker will be no underclass panel pictures. Only seniors will be organized in class form. Underclassmen will be featured as campus residents in the organized houses where they live and as Lincoln residents for all those that are living in apartments or who are residents of Lincoln.

These extras pages will be devoted to more academic coverage on academic events. All these correct revisions were approved by the Publications Board.

Damp, Warm Temperatures To Continue

Cornhuskers can expect mostly cloudy weather today, according to the Lincoln Weather Bureau. Scattered light showers and possibly thunderstorms may appear throughout the day in Lincoln land.

The warm humid weather may continue for several days, with highs in the lower sixties and lows in the forties.
