Thanksgiving Release On Student Directories

The machinery started to roll in force Tuesday to get the Student Directories out to University students.

Sally Flannigan, the University Builders Association's chairman of the Student Directory, said that the tentative release date will be the week before Thanksgiving.

The cost of the book will be 85 cents and will include the names, addresses and telephone numbers of all students, faculty members and graduate students of the University.

High Temp To Reach 86 Wednesday

If University students felt as if they would get a heat rash Tuesday, they will probably be melting by this afternoon when the high temperature reaches 86.

Little or no wind will blow fresh breezes through the air to cool things off. Does anyone remember a year ago when the temperature dipped to a near freezing 36?

Prohibit Frosh Parking:

Iowa Proposes Solution To Parking

The Traffic Committee and Traffic Appeals Board at Iowa State University has drawn up a recommendation proposing that 1958 freshmen be prohibited from bringing cars to school.

The plan, which has been submitted to Iowa State president, James Hilton, will be taken up by the Administrative Board and eventually with the Board of Regents.

Iowa professor of civil engineering, Ladis Csanyi, stated that placing restrictions on student automobiles is becoming a common practice in colleges throughout the country.

"The situation is not unique. Everyone is trying to find a solution without being too harsh," Csanyi said.

A similar proposal involving partial parking prohibition of freshmen cars was brought up at a Student Council meeting at Nebraska by Dave Keene, last year's president of the Parking Board of

8,164 Enroll At NU

Enrollment at the University totals 8,164 students, a drop of 261 students from a year ago, according to Floyd Hoover, registrar.

Chancellor Clifford Hardin said that two factors are reflecting in the decline: first, a tightening of scholastic standards at the University and second, the 33 per cent tuition increase passed last April by the legislature which became effective this fall.

"The 1957 enrollment," Chancellor Hardin said, "is somewhat less than pre-registration estimates but it is understandable in view of our tighter scholastic policy and the tuition increase."

Looking back into past Daily Nebraskans, an April 24, 1957 editorial speculated on the tuition raise and its effect on enrollment which was passed the day before.

And here are the results which, we believe, will follow this action: 1) Fewer out of state students will be coming to the University because of the tuition increase (2) Facilities for a big increase in enrollment will not be necessary as before (3) Possibly more money will be available for the fewer teachers needed to handle the "boom" enrollment (4) The University, which might have gained reputation as a fine institution of higher education — a top-notch school, will suffer from cuts in income in the bulk quarters and finally (5) the students who might have felt they could come to the University; who might have dreamed of higher education and

What do all these facts add up to? A future increase of students at the University? So far we have seen one semester of decreased enrollment.

The Chancellor explained that 170 students were dropped from the University's rolls for scholastic reasons at the close of the last semester than were dropped the previous year. This, he said, amounted to a cut in enrollment and resulted from the establishment of a higher minimum grade requirement. The old minimum level was a weighted grade average of a three. The new minimum is 3.5 or a grade of about 67 on the scale of 100.

In addition, Chancellor Hardin said, the University this year tightened up on acceptance of students transferring from other institutions. Only those in good scholastic standing were allowed to enroll. This resulted in keeping out at least 150 who in other years would have been allowed to enter on a probationary status.

"We have three reasons for believing that the tuition increase has affected the University's enrollment," he said.

"First, the number of entering freshmen appears to be fewer than a year ago but the scholastic quality of the new class is appreciably higher. This may indicate that the tuition increase discouraged students uncertain of their ability to do college work."

He said that the University's

English 3 course, reserved for entering freshmen who qualify as superior students, is a good barometer for measuring the scholastic quality of the incoming class.

This year 34 per cent of the entering Freshmen qualified for English 3 compared with 20 per cent last year, and 21 per cent in 1955. Meanwhile, only 17 per cent of this year's freshman class was found deficient and in need of remedial English as compared with 21 per cent last year, and 29 per cent in 1955.

"Second," Chancellor Hardin continued, "the statistical pattern set by returning students is slightly different from what it has been in other years.

"Preliminary study of this year's pattern indicates that a slightly smaller percentage of each class returned than usually comes back. If the returning student pattern had followed the customary trend, the University would have about 200 more students than are now registered.

"Third, the University's enrollment experience this fall deviates from the general experience of schools whose tuition charges remained unchanged. Virtually all of the schools who did not raise tuition have had enrollment gains."

The Chancellor said preliminary figures show enrollment in the Graduate college is slightly higher than a year ago. This, he said, is a further indication of the strength of the institution's scholastic program.

In an interview James Pittenger, assistant to the Chancellor, expressed his views on the decrease with the following:

"One of the factors of the decrease in enrollment may be from students not maintaining the necessary University average and others not yet University students afraid to attempt the challenge of a college education because of the grade average.

Asked if the decrease will effect the expansion program of the University, Pittenger replied, "no, the program will not be affected since the building levy is a separate fund supported by the taxpayers of Nebraska."

Could Nebraska increase their enrollment in the future? was another question asked of the assistant. "A good University has to have good students thus the existing University body will have to encourage high school students and other interested persons to attend Nebraska and not other colleges."

Is the spirit of the University affected in any way by the enrollment? "Spirited schools are always vital to the development of an outstanding institution. Spirit takes in many factors such as football, basketball, track, glee clubs, drama and other activities carried on by the student body. All of these things affect students and the whole University by the influence of importance students make through these activities."

How can we encourage students who rate high scholastically and others who are athletically inclined to attend Nebraska was another question asked of Pittenger. "Encouragement of students to continue their education is a main factor in getting students to a school of higher education. Scholarships help the financial status of a student who can't afford college. The Foundation is working on the problem of out-state student scholarships.

Instructors at Nebraska do have an effect on the student body but not until after a long period of time. Thus this can not be a factor in the sudden decrease of students this semester.

Back In '49: Salaries Created Issue

Faculty salaries were creating an issue in 1949. It was reported in the Feb. 17 issue of the Daily Nebraskan that a New York executive shamed the University for low incomes of professors.

Mr. Eugene Rob, assistant general manager of Hearst newspaper, spoke before 300 people at an alumni banquet, to help celebrate the 80th anniversary of the University.

"The least that most universities have been able to do is to set up a state-supported retirement plan for their faculty members," Rob said.

"I was shocked when I inquired about this in New York before I
