Decrease: Enrollment Opinions Vary

University enrollment has decreased 231 students from last year. The administration attributes this fact to tuition increase and a tightening of entrance requirements. A poll taken of University students indicates a similar opinion.

As Neil Ruckdashel, a senior in business administration, said: "Because of increased tuition, it is almost as cheap for students to attend Colorado University."

Ann Holloway, a sophomore in arts and sciences, expressed the same view: "Students have to work before they can get enough money pay the tuition, especially out-of-state students."

One student expressed it like this: "For the price of the tuition, not enough is offered the student."

On the issue of entrance requirements, Ruthie Gilbert, a junior in teacher's college, summed it up by saying: "I really believe that the more strict entrance re-

Ag Campus Welcomes Tiger Cat

There was a new staff member in the Department of Information on Ag Campus this week. It's a cat.

George, a 3 month old gray tiger striped cat, wandered into the Department's office looking for a home. Department staff members took pity on George and gave him something to eat and a place to sleep.

During his stay in the Department, George did nothing but sleep. He picked a file box on one of the Department secretary's desk for his bed.

When dinner time came around and George looked hungry, one of the secretaries gave him part of her lunch. The Dairy Department also furnished some milk for George to drink.

It has been rumored that George spent time in several classes on Ag Campus. Students reported that George was seen in Zoology and Agronomy classes. One student reported that George crawled up on a chair and fell asleep during a lecture.

While visiting the Department, George didn't seem to have a worry. He now is assured of a good home because Phil Holman, assistant Experiment Station Editor, took a liking to him and has decided to make him a part of his family.

Holman reports that George is housebroken.

Paul Smith, instructor at Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, Ia., received the first award at Des Moines Art Center show. John Bashor, a member of the faculty at Bethany College, Lindsborg, Kan.

Mary Chenoweth, of Colorado Springs, Colo.

John Talleur, a member of the University of Kansas faculty and a 1952 Fulbright Scholar; his works are owned by Museum of Modern Art and Metropolitan Museum, both in New York.

NU Agronomists To Tour K-State

Approximately 10 club representatives and their advisor, Dr. John Godding, will make the trip.

The group will tour the Agronomy Department facilities and the Agronomy Farm at Manhattan, Kansas.

The group also will attend the Kansas-Nebraska football game.

NU Senior Offers Partial Solution To Parking Ills

A partial solution to the campus parking problem by the utilization of "R" Street for parking space has been offered by Eugene Wright, senior in Architectural College.

According to his plan R Street from 16th to 18th would be a one way street going east, accommodating campus traffic only. The present parallel parking would be changed to diagonal parking, thus allowing five cars to park where only two cars park now.

Wright estimates that more than 200 additional cars could be parked there.

The present flow of traffic could be diverted to "Q" Street.

When questioned about a more inclusive solution, Wright remained optimistic. He feels that if a practical attitude is adopted toward the situation, a suitable solution will be found.

Wright warned against sacrificing beauty in order to obtain a functional solution. He cited the parking lot that is under construction west of Teacher's College's new annex as an example of beauty being sacrificed for a functional purpose.

The pictures will be on display in the Main Lounge of the Union for about two weeks.

Parking: University Added New Lots This Year

By BOB IRELAND
Chief Copy Editor

Ed. Note: This is the last in a series of articles concerning the parking situation at the University. More will follow on specific problems, measures of correction, and plans which will come in the future.

There's space for most students to park cars even if they have to walk a few blocks is the conclusion that must be made after reviewing the statistics and talking with University officials.

The University's downtown campus currently has 2876 parking stalls available for students living more than eight blocks from the college area according to figures released by the Campus Police.

Statistics also show that some 2999 students had paid for parking stickers which entitled them to use this available space as of Wednesday.

New Lots

New this year are lots in the vicinity of 17th and Vine streets which accommodate approximately 200 cars according to Sgt. John Furrow, chief of the campus police.

However, almost all of the available parking area behind the Student Union will be lost sometime in November, according to Jim Pittenger, special assistant to the Chancellor and member of a special University parking committee.

"We have been conscious of the fact that we would lose the space," Pittenger said, "and we have tried to provide additional space" to compensate for the loss. Pittenger added that the Union loss was more than equalled by the newly constructed lots between 16th and 17th and North Side and Vine.

Half-Filled

Both Furrow and Pittenger emphasized that the lots near 17th and Vine although available for fraternities and other students and having a capacity of over 200 cars are never more than half-filled.

It required over $4500 to construct the new lots, Pittenger stated.

"Things are going to get more and more crucial in the central area" of the campus, Pittenger stressed. He also mentioned the difficulty in acquiring parking space of a central locale which would satisfy all of the people involved.

Development

The chancellor's assistant announced four specific evidences of the University's parking development.

1. The provision of new lots which are presently in use.
2. The manual effort which is being made by the Student Council and Parking Board of Appeals and the University.

3. The special committee on parking which was established last spring by Chancellor Hardin. Members of this committee are Dean J. P. Colbert, Carl Donaldson, John Davidson, a Student Council representative, Pittenger and Furrow.

4. The close co-operation between the Student Council and the campus police in the issuance of the 1957-58 parking stickers.

Possible Fee Raise

When asked if there would be a possible raise in the parking sticker fees, Pittenger replied that it would be "one control measure that should be considered along with the other possibilities."

Pittenger stated that the special parking committee, of which he is a member, will take surveys of the parking situation in their efforts to provide a plan for the University.

Sgt. Furrow stated that the campus police issue very few tickets to fraternity and sorority members. He also mentioned the illegality of parking between the sidewalk and the curb.

"We have been extremely pleased with the co-operation we have received from the city police in helping us with the parking problem on campus," Pittenger stated.
