What We Want

Pub Board interviews by the Student Council are scheduled this weekend.

And the students who are looking for seats on that important body have grave responsibility to the students at this University.

If we may add our two cents worth to the argument we'd like to propose the following thoughts for the consideration of those who would serve the students to the best of their abilities.

The function of the pub board is to be a group of amateurs who, with the suggestions of a technical advisor can come to some judgment on the proposals of the editors of student publications.

But this job calls for more than just a willingness to learn what is going on in the basement of the Union.

It calls for men and women with integrity who will work to be disinterested and to pass fair judgments. We have suggested that in the past some student members of the pub board have used that group for personal advantage.

And to the Student Council nominating committee will be looking for students who have the good judgment, the character and the responsibility to handle the tasks of this important faculty committee.

During the week end the Daily Nebraskan has called for an increase in the knowledge on the part of the student council committee and the applicants to understand the problems faced by the student publications in order to insure that the best possible candidates are selected for the board.

We are now counting on the student council to keep up the good work it started at the beginning of the semester in making judicious appraisals of the candidates and supplying the pub board with a crop of industrious, intelligent and interested members from the students side of the table.

Enrollment

It is still too early to see the final trends of this year's enrollment, those figures are now available are incomplete.

But these figures do show the definite trend in a lower enrollment. Chancellor Clifford M. Hardin expressed the opinion that the drop can be attributed mainly to higher scholastic standards and an increase in tuition.

The facts on the enrollment, though incomplete, show that there will be 261 fewer students at the University this year than were enrolled last year.

We view with favor the fact that, although the University enrollment is down from last year, the quality of students has been improved.

It is a great credit to the University that it seeks better quality of students instead of large numbers of students. Reports from instructors indicate that the quality of students this year in the freshman class is better than any in the past. Supporting these opinions, are the statistics on the numbers of freshmen enrolled in the various courses of freshman English. The figures show that 34 per cent of the freshmen are enrolled in English 3, the most advanced level of freshman English, as compared with only 20 per cent of last year's freshman class being placed in this course. Also this year only 17 per cent of the new students were placed in remedial English courses, as compared with 25 per cent last year. The same pattern holds true for the math and other departments of the University.

Reports by University officials last year prior to the Legislature's measure which cut the University's budget and consequently made the tuition increase a necessity, showed the anticipated enrollment for 1957-58 to be from 700 to 1400 students above the enrollment for that year.

The question, and one that must remain unanswered, is whether the students which we "lost" were actually all destined to be poor students. How many of those students who failed to attend the university because of tuition problems would have made good students? This was brought up last year before the Unicameral acted on the tuition hike. Now we wonder just how many students are deprived of the education to which they are entitled, those who would have made good students but for financial reasons could not afford the increased tuition. When ever a person who has the scholastic ability is denied the right to attend college, we must question the system which denies him that right, and weigh the question before we can definitely decide whether the increased tuition and lower enrollment is good or not.

Ever since the Faculty Senate passed on December 13, 1955, a resolution depriving the student members on Faculty Committees of their vote, the issue has been shrouded in biased newsprint and falsifications on the part of certain students.

Here are some interesting points for the students who wish to solve the problem rather than promote themselves by crusading with the issue.

(1.) About five years ago students were placed on the Faculty Senate Calendar, Commencement, Examination, Student Affairs, Social Affairs and Publications Committees by the Student Council with the Senate's approval. These students were to have a vote. It was a temporary arrangement to last three years.

(2.) An attempt was made several years later to place student members on more than these six committees. Upon investigation, it was discovered that the three year limit had expired and that the students actually had no right on these committees, let alone to vote.

(3.) On December 13, 1955, the Senate passed the resolution taking away student voting on these six committees, but allowing the students to remain on the committees. It is this action that has caused the Student Council last week to unanimously vote to send a letter to the Dean of Student Affairs requesting him to take the necessary steps to obtain the vote for students on Faculty Committees.

Many students have been quick to condemn the Faculty for its slow action concerning the question. Nevertheless, it is this point which many students have overlooked:

What method exists for selecting on a permanent basis student members to Faculty Committees? The fact of the matter is simply that there is no provision in the Student Council constitution for selecting these students.

When the situation first arose five years ago, it was taken care of by the Student Council President appointing these students from the Council as provided for in Article VI, Section 2, under "duties of the president". Students are now asking the Faculty Senate to make permanent in their committees something which is only vaguely provided for in the Student Council.

The issue becomes clearer when one reads the comments of the Faculty last semester. On March 12, 1957, the Daily Nebraskan quoted Dean of Student Affairs Colbert as saying the question was not whether the students were capable of voting but that under the present arrangement, "students ... could not be held responsible for their actions."

Chancellor Hardin at the Chancellor's Roundtable on March 27, 1957, commented that he would favor an all-campus election to select student members on faculty committees if some method were found whereby qualified people were nominated.

This year Student Council members were placed on the various faculty committees by President

Helen Gourlay and the Executive Board. This method is excellent and I'm sure would be acceptable to the faculty if incorporated into the Student Council constitution. Nevertheless, as it stands now, the constitution makes no provision for selecting student members on faculty committees.

Perhaps it would be wise for the Student Council to first establish a reasonable method for selecting these student members

Fashion As I See It

by Wendy Makepeace

Are you the economical type? I know I sure am. I am always trying to find a smart outfit for a good price. Most university co-eds have a rather strict budget and are usually looking for an outfit that will serve them in many ways and many times.

The ensemble shown here can be worn on many different occasions and you will always be well dressed. It consists of a 100% black wool jumper, a white pique dixie, and a wool box jacket of dark toned stripes. Wear the whole outfit for an afternoon or evening of fun. Take the dixie off and you are ready for a dresser party. Wear the jacket with any of your own wool skirts and sweaters for a football game or wear a perky blouse with the jumper for classes.

Now you have four outfits in one for only 22.95. The sizes range from 7-15.

Visit Gold's Campus shop on second floor and look at this fashion hit for budget wise co-eds.
