Extension Meeting:

Discussion To Test North Platte Interest

Possible expansion of North Platte's off-campus classes will be discussed today at 8 p.m. in North Platte, Dr. K. O. Broady, director of the Extension Division, said.

If there is enough interest, more action will be taken, Broady added.

Chancellor Hardin made the following statement. "The University of Nebraska was approached by Supt. Otto Oakes at the direction of the North Platte Board of Education about the possibility of expanding through the Extension Division its present North Platte off-campus offerings, which number two—geography and an education course.

"The University administration indicated interest in the possibility, providing financial and staff problems could be worked out."

The Extension Division has been in operation in our state since 1932 and offers 41 courses in 30 different communities," Hardin said.

"It is obvious that it would be possible to provide only limited offerings in five or six academic subjects and the present policy of having the off-campus instruction pay its own way would have to continue. Under present off-campus plans, instructors from the University who teach do so on a part-time basis and are paid from revenue from the courses," Hardin added.

If the proposed expansion were to take place in North Platte, it would be necessary to employ some full-time instructors, he said.

"The plan, if it were to be worked out, would mean providing more educational opportunities for high school graduates. The present off-campus offerings are chiefly in the junior and senior college level areas and in graduate work," the Chancellor concluded.

Two college classes have been started in Grand Island under the University of Nebraska off-campus program according to Einar Toft, director of the Grand Island night school program.

He said it is expected that five or six more will be organized next fall and that fees pay the full expense.

Vacation

Faculty Criticize Holiday

The unscheduled holiday Monday caused criticism, varied reactions and a few commending words among faculty members.

Merk Hobson, dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture said he suspected some of the faculty members felt their class schedules were disrupted by the holiday. He warned that too many such holidays would be detrimental to the school.

University Presbyterian minister, Rex Knowles, felt that it was a nice thing for the administration to increase the joy and enthusiasm of the students.

Howard Tempero, associate professor of education psychology and measurements felt that the students really gained nothing by having the holiday. Why? The students had paid for instruction they could not receive.

"Students should riot when they have victories but the administration should deny them their holidays," commented Ross Garner, assistant professor of English.

Earl Fullbrook, dean of the College of Business Administration said that he had received no complaints from his faculty members, adding, "the only objection was from one student who showed up for his 8 o'clock class only to find it had been cancelled."

NU First To Fire Huskers

Students Cheer Team Monday

The first University basketball rally in recent years will start the fire in the Huskerites before they meet Kansas State Monday night.

The rally will kick-off at the Carillon Tower at 4:30 p.m. Monday. It will continue up Vine Street to 16th, down 16th to R, and from R to the Union.

Waiting for the crowd on the Union steps will be speakers, Coach Jerry Bush, Gary Reimers, captain of the basketball team, and Chancellor Clifford Hardin.

"Full and running over with team spirit" is the word to be passed out to students as they arrive, according to Stan Widman and Bill McQuistan, co-chairmen of the Corn Cob Rally Committee.

Ticket sales for the 8:05 p.m. game are falling short, reports A. J. Lewandowski. Only about 500 of the 4,000 available tickets have been sold, 250 of these to students, he commented. Tickets are available in the Coliseum.

Rally signs are welcome and urged for the rally, but students are requested to leave organization names off the banners, McQuistan added.

Med Schools Advise Tests

Candidates for admission to medical schools in the fall of 1959 have been advised to take the Medical College Admission Test in May, the Educational Testing Service has announced.

The tests will in the future be required of applicants by almost every medical college throughout the country and will be given twice during the calendar year.

Candidates may take the test on May 3 or October 28 at administrations to be held at more than 300 local centers in all parts of the country.

The association of American Medical Colleges recommends that candidates for admission to classes starting in the fall of 1959 take the May test.

New Star-Adjuster

Dr. C. Bertrand Schultz, University State Museum planetarium director, and Herbert Williams, consultant for Spitz Laboratories, are adjusting stars with a new instrument to be used on the dome of the planetarium. The planetarium, which was begun last fall, was presented by Ralph Mueller, 1893 University graduate. The gift was made through the University Foundation and was accepted by the Board of Regents last June. The planetarium is the only one of its kind in Nebraska and will seat 125 persons. Instruction of astronomy, geography, mathematics and other physical sciences will be made through the use of the planetarium. The Planetarium will be dedicated March 23 and will be used in conjunction with the International Geophysical Year.

Interest Shown In Freed Resolution

Students Give Views On Social Regulation

The resolution requesting standardization of University regulations which will be presented by Ken Freed to the Student Council has aroused the interest of many student and faculty members.

Freed, Business Administration representative to the Student Council, proposes that a committee of Student Council members and faculty members study the problem created by the nebulous character of the social regulations of the University.

A clarification and codification are requested so the students will know under what specific regulations they are judged with regards to a social conduct.

Student opinions are mostly in favor of the resolution.

Jack Pollack says, "A codification has been needed for a long time. It will help both the students and the administration (Division of Student Affairs). Certainly it can't hurt anyone."

Helen Gourlay, president of Student Council, states that she doesn't know all the facts as the resolution has not yet been presented to the Council. She admits that "there seems to be some confusion about social regulations so a codification would be good."

Dave Keene, chairman of the Student Council Tribunal committee, mentioned that the problem was recognized last year, but that nothing was done. He added, "It will be a tremendous task, bigger than people think."

"It's a real issue," Keene continued, "and I'm glad to see it's being talked about."

Sharon Steiner, president of Fedde Hall, commented, "It is a good way of making things equal."

The resolution will be presented to the Student Council at 4 p.m. today.

Oil Magazine Publishes Prof's Work

James Weber, associate professor of chemical engineering has co-authored a technical article which was published in the current issue of Petroleum Refiner, international oil publication of Gulf Publishing Co.

Weber's article is entitled "Equilibrium Data Now Available for Cyclohexane." It deals with the practical method of calculating the vapor equilibrium constants for pure components.

Data which Weber collected himself concerning cyclohexane are presented to show how the method works.

Weber, in addition to his teaching duties carries on research in chemical engineering and also engages in consulting work in the petroleum industry.

A graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, he received his M.S. degree there in 1947 and his Ph.D. degree the following year.

Weber's co-author was Dwight Hoffman, associate professor of chemical engineering at the University of Idaho.

Students Fill Alum Magazine

February Issue Is Class Effort

All articles appearing in the February issue of the Nebraska Alumnus were written by students enrolled in Professor Robert Cranford's magazine article class.

The issue marks the first anniversary of a cooperative venture between the University's School of Journalism and the Alumni Association.

The project was worked out last year by Phil Holman, then editor of the Alumnus, and Dr. William Hall, director of the School of Journalism.

Success of last year's Student-written edition prompted continuation of the project, Miss Adams said.

All articles written by the 20-member class could not be included in one issue. The remainder stories will be printed in a later edition.

Contributors to the magazine include Roberta Holt, Carolyn Williams, Elizabeth Jacobs, Dick James, Helen Bishop, Pat Protty, Mary Janet Bergquist and Sara Alexander.

This month's articles range from a story of the University's School of Nursing to the School of Agriculture at Curtis. Other articles discuss the new microfilm reader at Love Memorial Library, careers in home economics journalism, University traditions and Eden Smith Hall, which will be razed to make way for University progress.

A profile article on Dr. Esther Anderson of the geography staff completes the student contributions.

Three Hungarians Remain After Year-Long Tenure

Miss Laszlo, Takacs, Szabo Continue Studies

Three of our five student refugees from Hungary are still attending classes at the University.

The students came to the University a year ago under the sponsorship of the Hungarian Student Project Committee. They were: Sara Laszlo, Karoly (Charles) Nemeth, Lajos Molnar, Julius (Gyula) Szabo and Steven (Istvan) Takacs.

Sara Laszlo from Duncescentgyogy, Hungary, was the first student to arrive. Majoring in chemical engineering, the 20-year-old girl has been living at the Residence Halls for Women.

Last summer Miss Laszlo worked at a hospital in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. She has a Panhellenic scholarship and each sorority plans to entertain her at a function in the next few weeks.

Before coming to the University, Miss Laszlo studied English for three weeks at Bard College in N.Y., and since then she has quickly picked up our language.

She attended school in Hungary where she studied chemical engineering with other Hungarian and Russian students.

Before escaping over the border to Austria, Miss Laszlo participated in the demonstrations there. Later she escaped with her cousin and his family during the night without her parents' knowledge. Her parents still live in Hungary, where her father is a farmer.

Miss Laszlo plans to file for citizenship papers. She is presently a member of Tassels and Coed Counselors.

Julius Szabo (Gyula) Szabo, majoring in agronomy, is living in a private home on Ag Campus and has been eating his meals at Farmhouse fraternity.

The 24-year-old student from Moso, Hungary, spent the summer working in Colorado on a railroad construction crew.

Szabo attended Agricultural High School in Moso. Upon graduation he served in the Hungarian army for three years. He was not accepted at the University of Hungary because his family was considered a political risk. During his time in the army, he succeeded in enrolling in the School of Farming in Budapest. He was attending school there when the revolt began.

Steve Takacs The other student remaining at the University is Steve Takacs, who is entered in the College of Engineering. He has been living at the Sigma Chi house this past year.

This summer Takacs worked in a nursery on a farm in Scottsbluff.

Charles Nemeth and Lajos Molnar are now attending other colleges.

Charles Nemeth The second Hungarian student, Karoly (Charles) Nemeth, came to the University soon after Miss Laszlo. He is a native of Acts Komaron Megye, and is sponsored by the resettlement agency, Church World Service.

Nemeth took pre-med courses at the University. At the present time, he is attending school in Washington, D.C., at the American University Medical School.

Before coming to the University, Nemeth, 26, studied English for four years and completed a short course in conversational English at Bard College in N.Y.

He escaped from Hungary on Nov. 14, 1956, and arrived in the U.S. on Dec. 12.

Louis Molnar received a scholarship to Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. where he is continuing his agricultural studies.

Molnar, 21, attended the University College of Agriculture. In Szekesfehervar, Hungary, he went to the Agricultural High School and later the University of Agronomy in Gado. He wishes to continue his studies in the field of agronomy with special emphasis on problems of plant cultivation and mechanized farming.

At the present time, the members of the Hungarian Student Project Committee are looking for part-time and summer jobs for the students.

Any students interested in working on the committee may contact Barb Sharpe, chairman.
