one of the greatest ages of all times," she said. "It behooves us to realize that we haven't begun to realize our potential. We must buckle down and absorb knowledge to prepare ourselves for the challenge that lies ahead."

Mrs. Priest said that her formal college education lasted for only two weeks, but that through extension courses and individual research, she educated herself.

"Had I been able to finish college, I might have gone through like a steer through a packing plant," she quipped.

Asked what role women were playing in America's economy, Mrs. Priest retorted, "There is hardly a place in the industrial world where the high heel hasn't left its stamp."

Considering woman's future in politics, she jokingly predicted that in fifty years one third of the seats in the House of Representatives and one half of those in the Senate will be occupied by women.

In a more serious vein, she said that women are becoming increasingly influential in politics and that to meet this challenge, they must have capacity for leadership and an understanding of national and international problems.

Among Mrs. Priest's political philosophies is the advice her mother gave her upon her first election as a delegate to the Utah State Republican Convention. Her mother told her "to be for someone but not against anyone."

"The opponent is not a racial to be discredited," Mrs. Priest added. "We may disagree on the issues (and we usually do), but that does not mean that I should disrespect his character."

Asked about her job as treasurer of the United States, Mrs. Priest said that her work was strictly administrative and that she has no part in policy making.

"I'm the banker, she said. "I just service the debt". Mrs. Priest was in Lincoln over the weekend to headline the annual Women's Conference sponsored by the University Mortar Boards.

Speech Teachers Get Report Card

Laase Commends System in Article

"The findings of our five year study with the use of student ratings in measurement of instruction in speech speak for themselves."

This was Dr. Leroy Laase's answer when asked to comment on his article in the January issue of "The Speech Teacher", a national professional journal.

Dr. Laase, chairman of the department of speech, noted, "We have found them helpful in improvement of instruction in the department."

"The scale which we used was developed especially for use in a department of speech, and in its present form would not be applicable to any other department."

"We do not wish to appear to be pressuring any other department into using student teacher ratings unless they believe that such ratings can be helpful to them."

Much of the value of the ratings depends upon the manner in which they are used. Laase emphasized that it was the instruction that was being rated, and not the instructors.

While for the most part, student attitude toward the ratings is constructive, an instructor must be ready to face such comments as: "Drop Dead", "You think you're the God Almighty!", and "You ought to be fired!"

Such comments are the exception rather than the rule however. Most suggestions are on the order of, "not enough time for quizz", "we need a new text," "cut down the recitation time," and "more personal contact with the student."

Among the twenty-five items used in the ratings were: personal appearance; friendliness; knowledge of

Month's Festivities Fete World Stage

Uni Theatre Joins Celebration With 'French' Ondine This Week

A Governor's Proclamation, a "foreign" play and an enthusiastic chairman are all going into the University Theatre's part in International Theatre Month.

Harry Stiver, instructor in Speech and Dramatic Arts is the chairman of the state program for ITM and as such is helping to promote "international understanding through the drama."

Stiver said that the Theatre Month is sponsored in the United States by the U.S. National Commission for UNESCO, the American Educational Theatre Association and the National Theatre Arts Council.

Ondine Wednesday Ondine, by French playwright Jean Giraudoux, is the contribution of the University Theatre during ITM. The play is directed by Margaret Servino, assistant professor of Speech and Dramatic Arts. The play opens Wednesday in the Howell Memorial Theatre.

A proclamation by Gov. Victor Anderson launched the International Theatre activities in the state, Stiver commented.

Anderson's message states, "Whereas, the theatre from time immemorial has been considered by man to be a means of education, communication and inspiration as well as entertainment, and a source of expression for creative genius; and,

"Whereas, enlightened people all over the world are becoming more and more conscious of the important part which the theatre can play in the promotion of international understanding and goodwill through drama which give insight into the lives and customs of men in all parts of the world; and,

"Whereas, the theatre in all its professional and amateur phases is being challenged by our scientific and technological society to prove its worth and value as a vital part of our lives; and,

"Whereas, many colleges and institutions of higher learning are planning to emphasize the place of the theatre in our modern world through a special convocation which will show the theatre as a vehicle of peace;

"I proclaim the month of March to be International Theatre Month and I strongly urge my fellow citizens to co-operate in the special observances planned by educational and theatrical groups and to familiarize themselves with the importance of the theatre in our lives."

Reservations for Ondine can be made at the Howell Memorial Theatre.

Extension Plan Aired

Over 300 people attended the North Platte meeting to discuss the possible expansion of off-campus classes last week, according to Dr. K. O. Broady, director of the University Extension division.

The North Platte Board of Education and University representatives told the people of the tentative plan to expand the present North Platte off campus offerings, Dr. Broady added.

A survey will be made to determine if there is enough interest in the community to make this possible, he added. The University is unable to put funds into this project. The money will have to come from community and tuition from the students, Dr. Broady said.
