

Sacks Deflated Chemise Germ Checked

The chemise germ may be spreading fast, but it hasn't afflicted all the campus coeds—yet.

A survey of ten girls was taken, asking what they thought of the chemise, would they wear one, and if so, why. The survey results may disillusion dress sellers.

One young lady commented, "I would never wear one, because they make a girl look like . . ."

"They're horrible; they make you look as if you were trying to hide something," said a freshman.

Another coed refused to answer on the grounds that she might incriminate herself.

Fashion As I See It

by Wendy Makepeace

Chemise and shirt dress in cute Ivy League styling. This shirt dress comes in solids, checks, and colors. The perfect dress for warm weather, you can wear it loose or belted. Buttons down the front and the button down collar add appeal.

See you in Gold's Campus Shop, second floor, where you will find this Campus favorite in sizes 7-15 for only $9.95.

One girl offered, "The only reason a woman will wear a chemise is because she is afraid not to."

Three others indicated that although they liked the chemise, it wasn't becoming to short girls.

One junior explained that she liked the new fashion and would probably wear one because "it is the style."

"You have to have the right figure to wear one of those things and if you have the right figure, why cover it up?" queried a coed who thought the chemise looked like a burlap sack dyed an Easter egg color.

May Lose Boyfriend "I like the chemise, but I can't wear one because my boyfriend won't go out with me if I do," explained another young miss.

The final blow to this criticism of the chemise came with this remark, "I nearly die laughing every time I see a girl in one of those things. I look like a parachute that forgot to fold itself up."

ACP Poll Democratic Party Wins Favor Of Ivy Echelon

According to results of a recent poll of students in many colleges across the United States, a large majority of the people interviewed feel the Democrats are most likely to win the 1960 presidential elections. Associated Collegiate Press National Poll of Student Opinion asked the question:

"As of right now, do you think the Democrats or the Republicans have a better chance of winning the 1960 presidential elections?"

Results indicate that a substantially higher proportion of coeds feel Democrats have a better chance. Eighty-four percent of them, as opposed to 72 percent of the college men, feel a Democratic victory will be forthcoming. Almost equal proportions of men and women favor Republican chances in 1960, but a substantially higher proportion of men were undecided. Overall results are as follows:

	Men	Women	Total
Democrats have better chance	72%	84%	78%
Republicans have better chance	12%	11%	11%
Don't Know/Undecided	16%	5%	11%

A University of Nebraska coed feels "People want and need a change" and consequently decides the Democrats have a better chance in 1960. "The nation is associating the economic trend with the Republican administration" was the reason given by a Wayne State University (Detroit, Mich.) senior for his reply that 1960 will probably see a new Democratic administration.

A sophomore coed from Queens College (Charlotte, N.C.) agrees that the Democrats have a better chance because "of the present recession," and a senior coed from Wayne State also joins the many students who felt economic difficulties have put the Republicans in a bad light. "The past years of 'Republican prosperity' should insure a Democratic victory in 1960" was her observation.

Another line of reasoning also became apparent in the comments on answers to the question. Many of the students interviewed based their conclusion of a 1960 Democratic victory on potential candidates. A Lake Forest College (Lake Forest, Ill.) freshman's opinion stems from a possible Republican ticket. He notes that Eisenhower cannot run again, and "feels Nixon is unpopular."

A senior at St. Mary's University, (San Antonio, Texas) looked at the other party's possible candidates for his conclusion. His comment: "The young Democrats look promising."

Several of the students interviewed gave general discontent with the Republican administration as their reason for feeling the Democrats will win in 1960, but only a very small proportion indicated they felt the president's three illnesses were a factor.

On the opposite side of the picture, a Chatham College (Pittsburgh, Pa.) junior coed feels the Republicans have a better chance in 1960. She reasons that "Northern and Southern Democrats are too badly split" for the Democrats to regain office in the next election. Others among the smaller proportion looking for a Republican victory in 1960 feel President Eisenhower's popularity will carry the party through into another term, even though he will be unable to run himself.

Among those undecided on the issue, some, such as a Lake Forest College (Lake Forest, Ill.) sophomore who commented "Who knows now?" feel it is too early to make a prediction. Representatives of other reasons for "Don't Know" answers were those given by a freshman and a junior at Missouri School of Mines (Rolla, Mo.). The first year student remarked "It's the man I vote for, not the party" and the junior expanded this feeling a bit by commenting "It depends on who is nominated. The people, I think, will vote for the person, not the party."

RICHARD MONTMEAT is a 1947 Industrial Design Graduate of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, New York. He joined General Electric's Television Receiver Department in 1948.

"A company that plans far ahead gives me the chance to work out my future"

"Pleasing design is no accident," says 32-year-old TV set designer Richard Montmeat. "It takes creative planning. At General Electric, we're constantly developing new product designs — including some for products which won't be on the market for several years. Ever since joining General Electric, I've had the opportunity and challenge of working toward the designs of the future. As I see it, a company which plans ahead gives me the chance to work out my own future, too."

lected for showing in an international design exposition in Milan, Italy. Progress in pleasing design — making appliances more enjoyable to own and use — is an important factor in our nation's growing use of electricity and in our constantly rising level of living. Planning now to satisfy future customers is important not only to the continued growth of the electrical industry, but to individual progress as well. Opportunity for long-range planning is part of the climate for self-development which is provided for General Electric's more than 29,000 college-graduate employees.

The creative accomplishments of Richard Montmeat have already brought him widespread recognition. He was awarded design patents in 1950 and 1955; he won the Industrial Designers Institute Award in 1955; and his design for the 1958 General Electric 17-inch portable television receiver was se-
