Drs. Raysor, Crowe Gain Foundation Teacher Grants

Faith, Zeal Needed—Klotsche

One's education is not complete unless some faith in ideas and principles is combined with a zeal for truth, Dr. J. Martin Klotsche, provost of the University of Wisconsin, said Tuesday morning at the annual University Honors Convocation.

Dr. Klotsche, a former Nebraskan, maintained that "the first obligation of an educated person is to acquire skills and habits of constructive and critical thinking." But he added, "The mere search for truth is not enough. An educated person is also one possessed of a sincerity of purpose and a concern over value."

Observing that even an orderly mind can leave a person uncertain about the purpose of life, Dr. Klotsche pointed out that the basic problems faced today are moral.

"A measure of belief must accompany knowledge, for a scientific account of the universe while accurate as far as it goes is yet inadequate and incomplete."

600 Students Feted At Honors Assembly

Dr. Thomas M. Raysor, professor of English, and Dr. Lawrence K. Crowe, professor of dairy husbandry, were honored Tuesday morning as the 1958 recipients of the University of Nebraska Foundation awards for distinguished teaching.

The awards, each consisting of a $1,000 stipend and a medalion, were presented at the 30th annual University of Nebraska Honors Convocation by W. W. Putney of Lincoln, past Foundation president.

More than 600 students from the top 10 per cent of the undergraduate and professional colleges of the University were also honored at the Convocation. A complete list of the award winners and student honor list will appear in Wednesday Daily Nebraskan.

Dr. Raysor received his award for distinguished teaching in humanities and social sciences, and Dr. Crowe in sciences and technology.

No Prize

In presenting the yearly awards, Mr. Putney said: "The awards are not given as a prize. Teaching is not a contest. They are presented to staff members who, in the opinion of the University's special selection committee, reflect the competence, the devotion, the character, and the inspiring qualities held by all distinguished teachers."

Prof. Raysor, who has served the University 23 years, is considered one of the world's foremost authorities on English critic and poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

A notice of Texas, Prof. Raysor is the author of "Coleridge's Shakespearean Criticism," "Coleridge's Miscellaneous Criticism," and part author of "English Romantic Poets," a critical study sponsored by the Modern Language Assn.

Fellowships

He has held the Sheldon fellowship from Harvard, post-doctoral fellowship from Johns Hopkins, Guggenheim Fellowship and Woods fellowship from the University of Nebraska.

Prof. Crowe has been a member of the University staff since 1925. He has been a Junior Division adviser, sponsor of Varsity Dairy Club, faculty representative of Ag Religious Council, fraternity adviser for Alpha Gamma Sigma and chairman of the University Wesley Foundation.

Dr. Crowe has taken an active interest in the Nebraska dairy industry on a statewide basis and has served as a consultant with many groups on sanitary aspects of dairy problems.

In nominating Dr. Crowe for the award, his colleagues said: "He has maintained a critical attitude toward his students' accomplishments, not being satisfied with less than the best, but tolerant of mistakes beyond control or mistakes not made too often. He has maintained a hearty laugh and a sense of humor, but at no time willing to sacrifice principles for the sake of popularity."

ulate it "for the Soviet system is not a safe pattern for us to follow."

He also advised against questioning the fundamental assumptions of the American educational system, saying a proper comparison between the United States and Soviet Union would not be between the extent and scope of scientific education and technological advance, but between free institutions, and a system of totalitarianism.

"Our system is pre-eminently superior in providing an education worthy and befitting of free men and designed to give everyone an opportunity to realize his full potential as a socially responsible person."

Baby TV Nears 1st Birthday Station Celebrates Growth, Educational Work

By Eric Prewitt Staff Writer

KUON-TV, University television station, is nearing the end of its first school year in its own studios and can look back at much progress.

Since the station started telecasting from new headquarters in the basement of the Temple Building last September, KUON-TV has expanded to an operation which now requires the services of more than 80 persons to present about 60 hours of programming weekly.

Splitting down this employment force, 12 persons are employed full time by the station in the capacities of station management personnel, directors, engineers and artists.

Part Timers

Some students also are employed for pay by the station on a part time basis as assistant production managers, assistant engineers and assistants in the art department. However, the bulk of KUON-TV's production workers are University students with an interest in television who work at the station on a volunteer basis. These students, some 40 in number, handle nearly all heavy jobs other than directing in Channel 12's telecasting operations.

The University television station, which used the facilities of KOLN-TV for telecasting from 1954 until last September, went on the air during the evening hours for the first time Nov. 4 of last year.

The station now goes on the air at 9 a.m. and signs off at 9:30 every night, Monday through Friday.

Culture

Being an educational television station, KUON-TV presents only programs it feels are of an educational and cultural value.

Direct in-school programs, classes taught from the studios to students in 26 small Nebraska high schools, are an important part of the station's educational function.

On the night schedule, KUON-TV features filmed programs received from the Educational Television and Radio Center in Ann Arbor, Mich., and also programs originating from the Temple Building studio. The nighttime shows, which are now listed daily in the Daily Nebraskan, touch upon such fields as science, art, gardening, mathematics, literature, homemaking, history and government.

Now that KUON-TV has moved to campus, many students have an opportunity to tour the studios and take a firsthand look at educational television, a rapidly developing phase of education, in action.
