Johrde Engineer Suggests Teaming

A design engineer Friday called for the teaming of engineers and technicians as a cure to what he called the "ailing engineering profession."

Paul Johrde, a 1947 graduate of the University, spoke at the annual College of Engineering and Architecture convocation on "A Challenge of All Engineers."

Johrde suggested the establishment of a supporting occupation, "engineering technicians who would assist an engineer in a manner similar to the way a nurse assists a doctor."

"There are thousands of men working today who years ago wasted time and money to obtain an engineering degree only to spend their lives doing a job that could be handled by a technician," he commented.

There are many routine repetitive calculations which can be done by technicians, the former University student said.

"In this era of rapid technical advances, the professional engineer should be a man trained in college for at least six years and the technician for two years. They could work together to produce most of the engineering requirements of the nation," Johrde stated.

Estes Trek Set For Two Y Men

Two students from the city campus YMCA will attend a leadership training conference for campus Y's, June 8-14 at Estes Park, Colo.

Ron Seeley and Herb Probasco were selected as representatives at a meeting last Wednesday evening.

The Y also decided to serve as judges for an essay contest to be sponsored by a local department store in co-operation with KOLN-TV. The contest is open to boys 8-14 who want to attend the YMCA camp this summer. Their essays will consist of letters in 50 words or less, "I want to go to camp because..." The Y will work with Dr. Robert Hough of the English department in judging the letters.

Rex Knowles, pastor of the Presbyterian Student House, will speak at the next meeting May 7.

Lighting Expert To Visit KUON

Verne Weber, staging and lighting director of the University of Michigan, will be at the University this week to consult with the staff members of KUON-TV about production problems in lighting.

Weber's visit is sponsored by the Educational Television and Radio Center Consultation Project with funds from the Fund for Adult Education, Ford Foundation.

Jack McBride, general manager of KUON-TV and director of University television, is currently on a leave of absence to serve as Project Director of the ETRC Consultation Service.

The service has hired experts in various program production fields to consult with stations on specific problems.

Student Council Meets At 3 P.M.

The time of the weekly Student Council meeting will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday instead of the regular 4 o'clock hour, according to Gary Frenzel, corresponding secretary.

Junior and Law college members of the Tribunal will be selected at the Wednesday meeting.

The earlier meeting was called to give more time for the selection of Student Tribunal judges, Frenzel said.

Dr. Buis Joins Summer Faculty

Dr. Anne Buis, home economics professor at Florida State University, has been appointed guest professor in vocational education for the 1958 summer session at the University.

Dr. Buis will work with vocational homemaking teachers on curriculum development in the senior high school classes for boys and girls. She received a Master of Science degree from the University of Tennessee and a Ph.D. from Ohio State University.

She has served as a member of the Advisory Council of the Florida Future Homemakers of America for the past five years.

YWCA To Hold May Breakfast

The YWCA will have its annual May morning breakfast Sunday at 8 a.m. in the basement of Presby House.

Miss Carrol Dean, director of the downtown Lincoln YWCA, will speak on "The Role of Women" at the breakfast.

Members of the Y and their mothers are invited to attend the breakfast, according to Terry Mitchem, president.

Housemothers of the organized houses on campus will be special guests. Senior Y members will be honored.

Tickets may be purchased from Y members for 50c.

NU Art Pieces Join Exhibition

Several art pieces from the University Art Galleries have been selected by the U.S. State Department as a part of the Contemporary American Sculpture exhibition at the World's Fair in Brussels this year.

Director Norman Geske said they are among 25 pieces of sculpture borrowed for the U.S. Pavilion as decorative highlights for the building, designed by Architect Edward Stone.

Selected were: Saul Baizerman's "Serenity," a hammered copper figure, from the F. M. Hall Collection and Katherine Nash's "Fledgling," a welded steel figure, from the Nebraska Art Association Collection.

New Republic Offers Ten $100 Prizes

The New Republic magazine is offering $1000 in awards in two categories: the state of American fiction—considered in general or in terms of a single younger novelist; and any aspect of present-day television—viewed as a medium for enlightenment or entertainment.

Ten awards are offered of $100 each, five awards in each category.

Essays should be 1,500-3,000 words in length. Applicants must be under 27 years of age.

Manuscripts will be judged by the editors of The New Republic, and must be submitted by October 1, 1958 to:

Awards Department, The New Republic, 1244 Nineteenth Street, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Orientation Set For Aurora Kids

A special program and reception will be held today in Aurora for high school juniors and seniors and University alumni from Hamilton County.

The program, sponsored by the University and the Nebraska Alumni Association, is the first of its kind to be held in the state. It is intended to acquaint high school students with the University program.

The program will begin at 2 p.m. when five University students will present a panel on the topic "Going to College." An evening reception will be held in the Aurora high school auditorium.

Arrangements for the day have been made by John Newman of Aurora, member of the Alumni Association's board of directors.

Casper Plans NU Doctorate

With three grants for doctoral study tucked into her pocketbook, Prof. Berenice Casper of the Trenton (N.J.) State Teachers College faculty will continue her studies at the University.

Miss Casper, a native of Lincoln, is the recipient of the A. J. Nystrom Memorial for advanced study in geography, the Delta Kappa Gamma International Scholarship for candidates who show promise of distinction in their respective fields of study and the Pi Lambda Theta Award for a student engaged in studying a problem showing promise of real contribution to the progress of educational theory of study.

Rosenblatt Initiated As Honorary ZBT

Mayor of Omaha, John John Rosenblatt, was initiated as an honorary Zeta Beta Tau and an associate of the Nebraska chapter.

More than 100 alumni and undergraduates attended the ceremony Thursday at the Blackstone Hotel in Omaha.

This honor is accorded only to persons who have achieved eminence in public, philanthropic, communal and civic activities.

Librarians Face Odd Queries

Memory, Telepathy, Research, Used

Finding the name of Ulysses' dog or how the ancient Chinese incubated eggs or what "the horror of Fuselli's horse" means is simply part of a day's work for the public service librarians at Love Memorial Library.

Either from memory, by painstaking research, or, occasionally, by mind reading, these University librarians manage to answer most of the hundreds of questions posed weekly to them.

It is a rare day, explains Bernard Kreissman, assistant director of libraries for humanities, that the research staff is completely puzzled. When this happens, he says, the questions are usually extremely obscure or concern phenomena too recent to be included in the source materials.

Lady Lou

A sportscaster's newly coined word, for instance, may not appear in any dictionary. But in this case, Kreissman says, the librarians can usually guess quite accurately at the meaning.

One time they were unable to confirm an inquirer's apparent belief that the character, Lady Lou, in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" referred to a specific woman.

However, the librarians have been able to provide such varied information as this: the ancient Chinese incubated eggs by slipping them in the long loose sleeves of the coolies; Ulysses' dog's name is Argus, and that Fuselli's horse means a grotesque horse in a nightmare depicted in one of the painter's works.

At times unanswered queries have led to interesting endings. When it was impossible to find adequate material about Christian Rohlf, the German Expressionist, for Manfred L. Keiler, associate professor of art, Kreissman observed that the area needed investigation. Keiler consequently undertook the project and later received a grant for research in Germany.

While the bulk of reference questions comes from students and faculty members, a large number of outside requests are also handled.

Certain categories of information are often sought, although most questions concern the use of the library's resources. Theater groups, for instance, request pictures of interiors and costumes.

Recently, for the University Theatre's production of "The Lark," a play based on the life of Joan of Arc, Kreissman described the toy Charles II played with.

Often the librarians are asked for photographs of literary references and explanations of symbols. They've been asked, for example, "Is there a Cooper's Hill?" and "Why is there a rose at the foot of a prisoner in jail?"

Many times the librarians receive only a vague hint, or even erroneous information in the original request. This is when mind reading helps. They were puzzled a long time by one housewife's inquiry about "a story about a famous Spanish parrot" mentioned by a club lecturer.

One of the librarians finally telephoned the woman and confirmed a hunch that the lecturer had actually referred to a "famous Spanish parody, 'Don Quixote.'" Another time, when a student asked for "Bail Wolf, the Greek Play," one librarian calmly pulled out "Beowulf," the Anglo-Saxon epic poem.

Another category deals with more involved questions requiring extensive research. These have ranged from "Did St. Thomas Aquinas have a definite position on capital punishment?" to "What have the great philosophers written on hate?"

To the Rescue

The librarians recently came to the aid of Paul Engle, the poet who spoke at a University Convocation in March. Mr. Engle had left behind all of his references, and two hours before the lecture appealed to the library. Well before the convocation, the librarians had found for him all of his works from the last 15 years.

Kreissman considers his biggest problem to be telling people who bring in beloved 100-year-old family Bibles that they are of no value to a book dealer.

"They look at me with utter disbelief," he says, adding that age alone does not determine a book's value. At times, however, he has uncovered books of value from the attic relics persons bring to his office.

AWS Tackles Problems Tonite

The AWS Workshop will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the Union, according to Nancy Copeland, chairman.

The purpose of the workshop is to give women students the opportunity to discuss their mutual problems with AWS.

Also under discussion will be the role of Associated Women Students and how it can better serve the needs of women students.

Although all University women are invited, AWS is requesting each house to send its president, vice-president, pledge-trainer, standards chairman, social chairman and AWS representative.

Rev. Rex Knowles will be the speaker at the meeting.
