Hall Collection Will Add Fame To NU Art Galleries

The University Art Galleries this summer will feature its most famous offering, the Frank M. Hall Collection of contemporary American paintings, sculpture, prints and drawings.

The collection was built by Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Hall, who both had a keen interest in art. Hall served as president of the Nebraska Art Association for many years, and his wife often lectured before the society, along with other art organizations.

Influenced by Instructor

When they were first married, Mrs. Hall was a member of a painting class which she helped organize for Sarah Wool Moore, who came to the University in 1884. Influenced by Miss Moore's encouragement and advice, the Halls began their own collection of original paintings and prints. Percy Moran's "The Lion of the Hour" was their first purchase.

The pictures, as they accumulated from year to year, were hung in their home, and they invited various organizations to view their collection. Time has proved the wisdom of their choices, because the individual pieces have increased consistently in value through the years.

Donated To NU

The Halls donated the collection to the University on their deaths, which were only a few months apart, along with a part of their estate. The interest from the estate is used to buy new works each year for the collection.

The will also provided that two nationally known art critics should be appointed to serve as advisers for the purchases. The critics chosen are Leila Mechlin, former editor of the American Magazine of Art and now secretary of the American Federation of Arts, and Royal Cortissoz, New York art critic.

Pictures that have been purchased since 1929 are: "The Pink Pinafore" by Robert Henri, "The Dining Room" by Frank W. Benson, "Nymph and Ducks" by Child Hassam, "Food Bearers" by Olive Rush, "The Old City" by Robert Spencer, "Bark and Schooner" by John H. Twachtman, "Almighty Spring" by Eugene Savage and "Mrs. Chase and Cozy" by William M. Chase.

New Students Confer Today

New students will confer with their advisors on Tuesday to plan their summer curriculum, according to Lee Chatfield, director of junior division.

The interviews will be by appointment. Chatfield said that about 50 new freshmen and about 150 new transfer students are expected to enroll for the summer session.

Chatfield explained that the new students would be required to go through the regular orientation sessions in the fall. Since there are few student activities conducted during the summer session, no non-academic orientation sessions are held, he said.

Seacrest Scholarship Awarded To James

Dick James, a 1958 mid-year graduate has been awarded the 1958 J. C. Seacrest Scholarship.

The $1,000 grant is given annually to a University journalism student for advanced study. James, who began study in April at Northwestern University's School of Journalism earlier received a $1,000 from that institution.

Honorary Degrees Conferred Saturday

Honorary doctor of science degrees were conferred by the University Saturday at the 87th annual Commencement.

The recipients were Dr. G. F. Sprague, member of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Dr. Franklin Murphy, chancellor of the University of Kansas.
