K-State Pulls Surprise Huskers Even Up Statistics But Can't Match Kansas State Scoring Drives

By Charles Coffin
Some 39,000 Band Day spectators, told by the experts to expect a nip-n-tuck battle all the way in Saturday's Nebraska-K-State contest, went home a little disillusioned. The injury-ridden Wildcats, refusing to lose heart after two close losses to Colorado and Utah State, whipped the Huskers 23-6.

Both teams are now 1-1 in the Big Eight.
Wha' hopped? Winning coach Bus Mertes of Kansas State offered this explanation: "That first touchdown (scored on an 80-yard drive five minutes after the kickoff) gave us a big lift. And we had some real hard running on our team. Mainly, what did it be the same thing that's been winning for Nebraska—a lot of heart."

Mertes was also generous in praising the losers. "Nebraska has a hell of a hard running club," he said, "and they gave us fits with their defense in the second period."
There were two moments during the game when it least came close.

The first was right after K-State's first score, when Nebraska, with backs Carroll Zaruba and Larry Naviaux taking the ball downfield in giant leaps, barreled to a first down on the Wildcat nine. Here a new platoon of Huskers was sent in and promptly fined five yards for backfield-in-motion. This clogged a drive that covered 75 futile yards.

In the third period, LeRoy

Zentle and Dick McCasland stole the ball and McCasland steamed 22 yards for a touchdown to bring NU within seven points of the K-Staters, 13-6, and Nebraska fans began to envision another last-quarter victory for the Huskers.
However, retaliation was swift: K-State, its offense stymied 18 yards from the Nebraska goal, turned to gifted halfback Ben Grosse. He toed the perfect field goal that most observers considered the turning point in the game.

Hukser Miscues
Two of the Wildcats' touchdowns were converted directly from Husker miscues. One followed a high pass from center on a fourth-down punt, the other, a pass interception. On the whole, the NU defense was hard-hitting and tough, though there were times late in the game when Nebraska's tackling was sub-par.

Judgment Day on the Husker offense was postponed for at least a week, for three of its leaders were sidelined for much of the game. George Harshman, No. 1 quarterback, suffered a slight concussion early in the first period; Zaruba left in the third quarter with a strained knee; and flashy halfback Pat Fischer, still weak from the flu and a bruised shoulder, saw action for only a few plays. (Of these and other bruised Huskers, however, none were seriously injured.)

Coach Bill Jennings evaluated the Nebraska offense this way: "Of course Harshman's being out hurt us—how much, we can't tell. I thought we moved the ball well. We just stopped ourselves," he said, referring to the penalties the Huskers incurred at crucial points throughout the afternoon.

The statistics seemed to back him up; they were much more even than on any previous Saturday for the Huskers. NU had 12 first downs to K-State's 14, and net yardage of 216 to the winners' 279.

IM Tournaments
League action in intramural touch football is rapidly coming to a close, and tournaments are already being set up by intramural director, Ed Higgenbotham.

The top three teams in each league are eligible for the tournament. The competition is set up so that any team in any league has a change at gaining the all-University championship.

Beta Theta Pi, Hitchcock, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon are major teams who have already gained positions in the upper brackets of the tourney.

Speaking for Radio KFMQ, I am happy to announce that we have engaged the Nebraska theatre for these two excellent films, both of which have won International film awards and are now film classics. Both films are now playing in large metropolitan cities at advanced prices. We have arranged this festival so that film classics of this caliber can be made available to all. Sammies Drop ZBT 27-7

Although the Z.B.T.'s managed to get a touchdown in the first quarter against the previously unscored upon Sigma Alpha Mu football team the Sammy defense led by Ken Freed and Alan Forman stopped the Zebs cold throughout the rest of the game.

Working their pass patterns to perfection, the Sammies scored in each of the four quarters as they won 27-7.

The first time the Sammies had possession, Norm Phillips passed to Bernie Turkel in the end zone. Stan Widman added the extra point.

The Zebs rallied and on a pass from Steve Rosenblatt to Milt Moskowitz they scored their only touchdown. Rosenblatt ran right to add the extra point. The score at the end of the first quarter was 7-7.

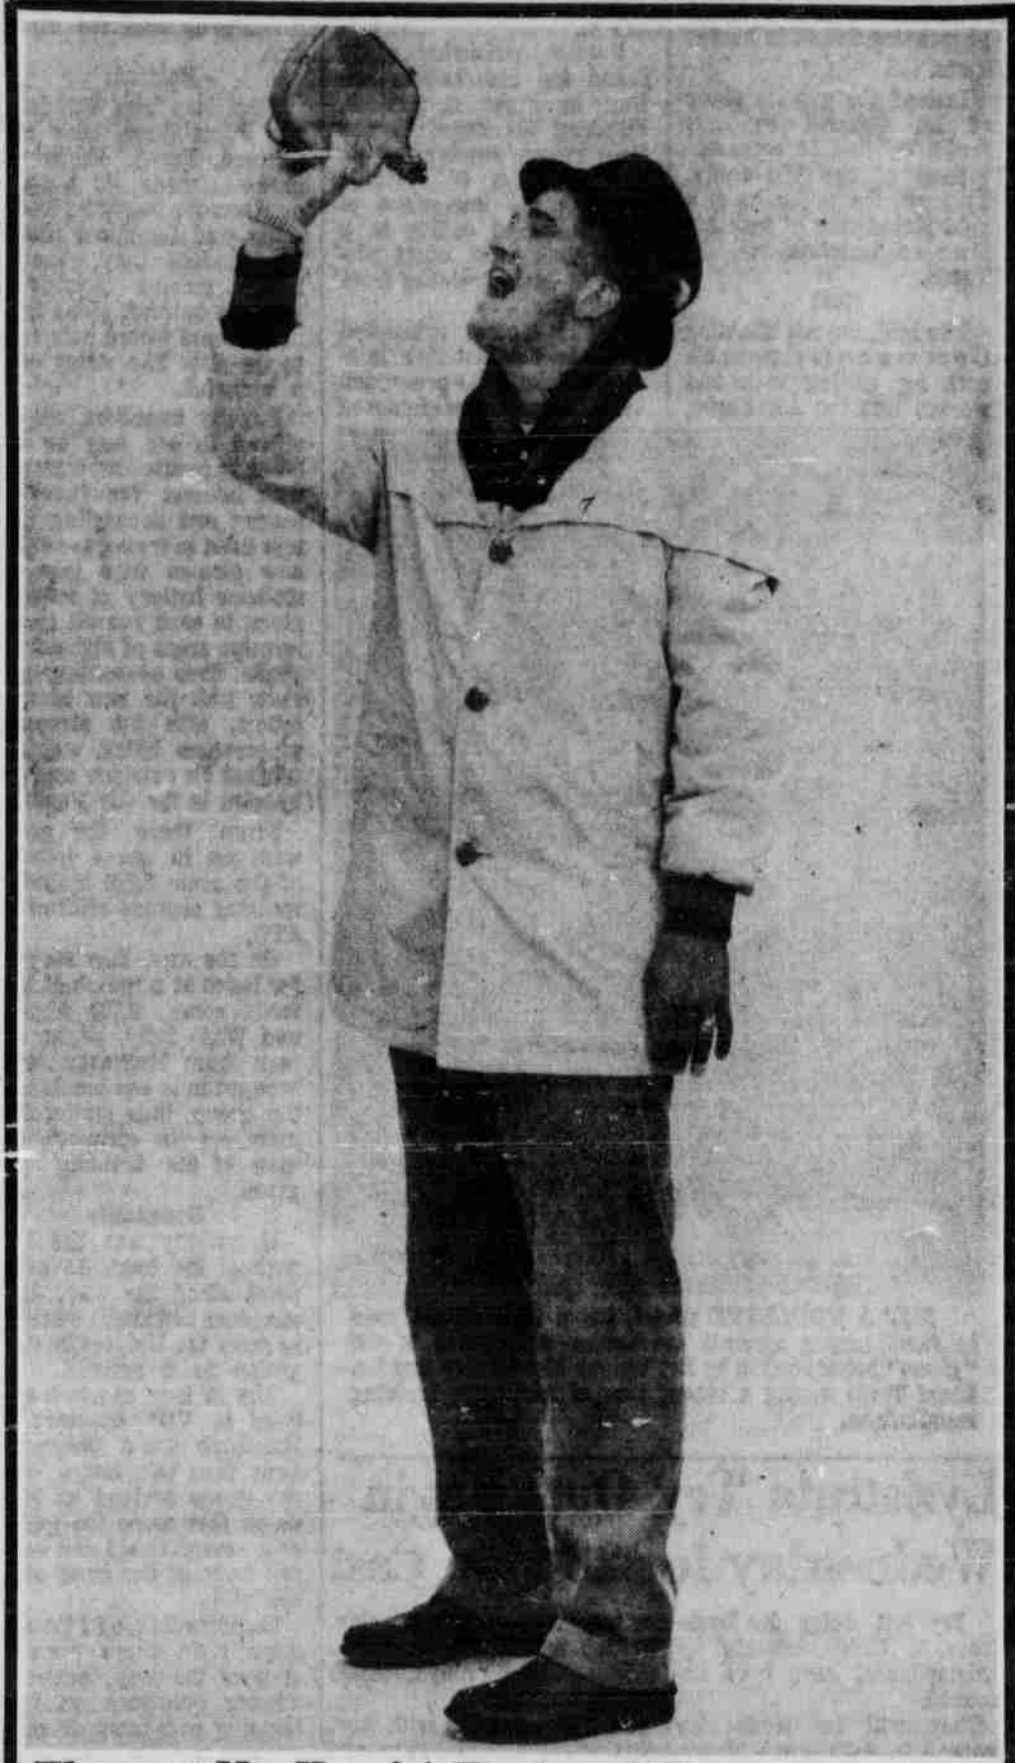

The ball almost at will the Sammies could only manage one more touchdown in the first half. That was on a forty-yard pass from Phillips to Howard Lipton.

The Sammies led 14-7 at the half.

The second half belonged to the Sammies as their two platoon system wore down the undermanned ZBT team. Phillips passing from behind the protection of blocking backs Bernie Turkel and Mel Levine, passes, including two touchdown throws to Stan Widman, but were stopped both times. In the fourth quarter the Zebs twice were able to move the ball into Sammie territory, but were stopped both times by end zone interceptions by Stan Widman and Harold Novicoff.

Nebraska Harriers Win

By Randall Lambert
Kansas State's cross country team fell before Nebraska 26 to 31 as the Huskers successfully opened the season at Pioneer Park, Saturday.

Joe Mullins, Nebraska junior from Nova Scotia, led all runners as he broke the tape in 15:04.5.

However, Mullins was pushed by Duane Holman of Kansas State, who finished with a timing of 15:07. Last year Mullins barely caught Holman at the finish line as the Husker was timed in 15:27.

Sophomore Joe American Horse showed promise as he finished in fourth place. However, American Horse was 22 seconds behind the third place finisher.
