Douglas, Newsmen to Speak

'Break The News' Is Campus First

University students wil be among the first in the nation to hear the unique "Break the News" type of panel.

During an All-University Convocation Monday, three Washington newsmen will question Sen. Paul Douglas on current national and international affairs. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited to the 11 p.m.

Audience Participation

Kenneth Crawford of Newsweek, Neal Stanford of the Christian Science Monitor and John Metcalf, Washington news analyst, will appear with the Illinois Senator.

Metcalf will moderate. Members of the audience will also be given an opportunity to question the senator.

In addition to the convocation, Senator Douglas will appear in the Union ballroom at 2 p.m. for an informal question period. Stanford will speak to journalism classes in the afternoon at the Historical Society.

Senator Douglas has gained nation-wide attention for his work on Senate Labor and Public Welfare and the Banking and Currency committees. His books on economics have made him internationally known in his field, and one of them, "The Theory of Wages," won a $5,000 prize in international competition.

An early advocate of old age pensions and unemploy-ment insurance, he also led the fight in Illinois in the 1930's to reduce electricity and bus rates and to protect investors in private utilities from financial manipulation

At the age of 50 during World War II, he enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps and rose through the ranks to lieutenant colonel, receiving the bronze star and the purple heart. After the war the senator returned to the University of Chicago as professor of economics, to give the kind of service that's building

America's second largest telephone system

When it comes to service we aim to deliver the goods. Result: we're growing fast! For in Gen Tel Territory, America is finding the room the overcrowded big cities can no longer supply. New homes, new stores, new factories are springing up fast.

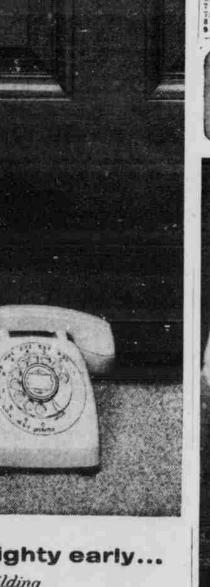

And so is the need for up-to-the-minute telephone communications. That's where Gen Tel comes in big. To meet the growing need for telephone service, we're installing 750 new phones each day, investing almost 4 million dollars each week in new facilities.

At Gen Tel we're working overtime to develop new uses for the telephone to keep ahead of the growing need for better and more complete communications. That's one reason we are America's second largest telephone system.

No doubt about it, America is on the move. And Gen Tel is moving with it-moving up.
