 services of Fricke, Fischer, Martz, Zaruba, and Bohanan, provided the followers with little to cheer about except for Dick McCashland's outstanding defensive work. Syracuse, like Penn State, was one of the better teams in the East and has now been picked to play Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

Colorado
 The following week Nebraska traveled to Colorado to face the undefeated Buffs who were pointing to the Oklahoma game. The Huskers, who were 19 point underdogs, had other ideas however. Led by some savage defensive work on the part of Don Fricke and Dennis Emanuel, Nebraska took advantage of Colorado fumbles and penalties to take a lead of 16-13 at the end of three quarters. Colorado depth made the difference in the final period as the Buffs went on to win 27-16. Harshman's punting was the best Nebraska has seen in recent years.

The Nebraska homecoming fared no better than the Kansas State game, three weeks earlier. A good Missouri team trounced the Huskers 31-0 with the Huskers again hampered by the loss of Fischer and Brede. Nebraska was simply worn out from the Colorado game and the loss of Fischer again forced Max Martz to play most of the game at left half.

A week later the Husker offense started to click. Carroll Zaruba was moved to left half for the Kansas game to alleviate the left half situation created by the injured Fisher and Martz. Kansas capitalized on a pass interception and a recovered fumble to win 29-7. The Huskers outgained and outdowned Kansas, but the breaks spelled the difference.

High Spot — Pitt
 The last home game of the season didn't offer the Huskers much of a chance for victory. Pittsburgh was a three touchdown favorite and earlier they had tied Army and defeated Notre Dame. Nebraska, however, played inspired ball, which resulted in a 14-7 upset.

The Pitt win was easily the biggest of the year. Nebraska by far played their best ball against the Panthers. There were few teams in the nation that could have stayed on the same field with the Huskers that afternoon.

The season ended on a low note as Nebraska went up against the Oklahoma Sooners and lost 40-7. The Sooners had too much depth, speed and ability for the Huskers. They were just outplayed from the opening kickoff.

Even though the Oklahoma loss and others somewhat tarnished Nebraska's wins over Penn State and Pitt, it goes without saying that Nebraska beat two teams that were better than any two defeated since the time of Bobby Reynolds. Also, considering the fact that Nebraska had little depth and was plagued with injuries throughout most of the season, the three wins are a credit to the team and the coaching staff. It should give this year's freshmen and returning veterans something to remember next year when the team should have more depth and size.

On the Social Side— Few Pinnings Announced With Vacation Coming

By Sue Healey
 Anticipation of a welcome vacation kept pinnings at a minimum this week. Midst the rush of packing for home, only two coeds found time to announce their pinnings. Five engagements were also announced.

Pinnings
 Jean Odum, a Gamma Phi Beta sophomore in Teachers from Schuyler, to Don Vondracek, a Sigma Phi Epsilon junior in Arts and Science, also from Schuyler.
 Janice Olson, a Gamma Phi Beta senior in Arts and Science from Fremont, to Ted Newburn, a Sigma Alpha Epsilon senior in Business Administration from Beatrice.

Engagements
 Mary Jane Wilhite, a Zeta Tau Alpha senior in Arts and Science from Nebraska City, to Ernie Hines, a Beta Theta Pi junior in Teachers from Lincoln.

Verne Hedge, one of the original 12 founders of Sigma Tau, national honorary for engineers, presented symbolic keys of membership to 27 initiates of the fraternity Thursday evening at the Lincoln Hotel.

Accompanying the presentation of keys was an address, "The Application of Engineering Principles to Social Problems," delivered by Professor Frederick Beutel of Law School.

Ag Students Judge Crops In Contest

Four University College of Agriculture students left Nov. 23 to compete in two collegiate crops judging contests in Kansas City, Mo. and Chicago, Ill.

Marvin Kyes, Norman Rohlfing, Moyn Keim and Fred Gordon will attend the contests. All are members of the University crops judging and identification team.

The Kansas City National Collegiate Grain Judging Contest is Nov. 25, and the International Collegiate Crops Judging Contest will be held in Chicago Nov. 29.

Dr. John Gooding, assistant professor of agronomy and team coach, and Dr. D. P. McGill, associate professor of agronomy accompanied the students.

Dr. McGill is an official judge for the contest in Kansas City.
