Creative Thinking
Originator Quits

A University Journalism professor noted for his work in creative thinking is retiring at the end of February.

Prof. Robert Crawford has been a member of the University staff since 1922. His retirement was accepted by the Board of Regents Wednesday.

Although best known for the establishment of the principle that creative thinking could be taught and is largely a mechanical process, he was also one of the originators of the University Foundation, wrote one of the first books dealing with magazine article procedure, establishing one of the first courses in public relations and wrote one of the first histories of the University, "These Fifty Years."

During World War II he served as a senior field representative for the Office of War Information. While in Florence, Italy, he carried on journalism instruction at the GI University.

For his work in creative thinking, Prof. Crawford received the Creativity Award at Notre Dame University in April, 1955.

Later Trial
For Furrow

The Municipal Court trial of Sgt. John Furrow, head of the University police, has been continued until next Wednesday.

Furrow pleaded innocent Feb. 7 to charges of leaving the scene of an accident in connection with a Feb. 2 incident.

Furrow has been head of the campus force since July 1, 1948.

...Solution

exactly when students wanted them, Blair said that the new system would be superior to the old hour system in that it requires students to follow the 2-5 rule for scheduling classes, (a rule made by the Faculty Senate to prevent a few students from obtaining the desirable hours and leaving afternoon and Saturday classes for the rest.)

Long lines as well as touring campus getting signatures would be eliminated by this system, Blair said.

The question of when to pay fees will probably be worked out so that a minimum number of trips to the Registrar's Office will be involved, he said.

Biggest Advantage

All things concerned, Blair concluded, the biggest advantage of the system will be that the University will have the opportunity to open new sections when they are needed.

Under the old hour system and the alphabetical system, the catalogue is set up on the basis of estimated enrollment in given courses. When a course becomes filled during registration, the Registrar contacts the department concerning the possibility of opening a new section.

The department chairmen must produce an instructor and classroom or the section remains closed.

Under the new system, the Registrar's Office would have ample time to notify departments when courses are becoming filled, thus giving an opportunity to open the needed number of sections to accommodate all students.

Members of the Council registrar's committee are Mary Vrba, Chuck Wilson, Jack Muck, Dave Godbey, Bob Paine and Blair, chairman.

University
Co-Sponsors
Conference

The University Extension division will co-sponsor a Nebraska Town and Country Church Commission Conference at the University Feb. 26 and 27.

Chancellor Clifford Hardin will speak at the conference. Other University faculty members who will participate include Phillip Henderson, Extension economist; Dr. Howard Ottosen, chairman of the agricultural economics department; A. H. Anderson, associate agricultural economist; Loyd Fischer, associate professor of agricultural economics; Dean Brown, Extension economist; and Dr. Paul Meadows, professor of sociology.

The Extension Division will also take part in the Nebraska Dairyman's Association meeting March 3 on Ag campus.

Ag Exec Board
Gets New Duty

The duties of the Farmers Fair Board have been taken over by the Ag Exec Board, according to a report by Gary Frenzel, chairman of the Student Council judiciary committee.

Last week, two elections were held for Farmers Fair Board and both of them were declared invalid because of ballot inaccuracies.

Frenzel also reported a change in the Corn Cob Constitution which would require nominations from the floor for officers. Previously, according to Frenzel, the outgoing officers made the selections of nominees for the following year's officers.

—Library Services—
Typewriters, Films
Available to Students

Some University students just don't know the score—about Love Library's services, that is.

A recent poll conducted by the Student Council revealed this ignorance.

Many students requested use of typewriters, microfilms and other services that the library already supplies.

Typewriters Available
There are typewriters in the stacks which may be used by students who ask for them at the loan desk.

Microfilms are also available upon request at the loan desk. The New York Times and the London Times are microfilmed from their first issues.

A complaint about the faculty holding library books too long is a complaint that may be easily remedied. If a student wants such a book, he may ask the library to call it in for him, according to F. A. Lundy, director of University Libraries.

Current books and periodicals are available at Love Library, but for recreational reading the Lincoln City Library and the Student Union Book Nook were recommended by Lundy.

Records and phonographs at the library are meant to aid music students. Language conversation records are available at the University's language labs.
