Library Lags Budgetwise, Regents Told

The "critical needs" of the University libraries were discussed in a report read at the Faculty Senate Tuesday. The report said that the University had lagged behind other states in the percentage of the budget spent on libraries. The report added that library service ranked only second to faculty salaries in importance.

Recommendations for honorary degrees were also given at the meeting. Results were not available for publication at this time.

Several additions to the wording of the duties of the Policy Committee were also approved.

Woman Graduate Grant Offered

Letters and Applications for a $500 fellowship open to a woman graduate student at the University are due April 1.

The fellowship is offered by the American Association of University Women, Lincoln Branch, to a woman who is continuing, or plans to continue her studies on the graduate level for the year 1959-60.

Application blanks may be obtained at the Office of the Graduate College. Letters of recommendation may be sent to the committee directly or enclosed with the application. Letters and applications may be mailed to Mrs. Harry Gaylor, 2020 Morningside Drive, Lincoln.

Teachers Seniors To Be Honored

Teachers College seniors will be honored at a coffee from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday in the University High School lounge.

The Dean's Advisory Board sponsors the annual event.

Contact Lenses Require Special Care, Caution

"This person is wearing contact lenses. In case of an accident, please remove them from the eyeballs."

A small white card bearing this information is tucked into the billfolds and purses of thousands of Americans. This information is important because contact lenses may injure the eyes if they remain on them for a long period of time.

Micro-Glasses These plastic micro-lenses placed on the pupil of the eyes are designed to take the place of glasses.

Because of their size and delicacy, contact lenses require special care. Doctors recommend that the micro-glasses be cleaned every day by a) removing the lenses from their small cloth case, b) washing them with a special "wetting solution" or with saliva c) rinsing them in warm water, and letting them dry.

The special "wetting" solution plus water provides moisture which floats between the eyeball and the lense preventing pressure directly on the eyeball.

Placed In Eye The lenses are placed on the eye by balancing the lenses on the index finger, pulling down the lower eyelid and placing the lens on the pupil. If it misses, simply push the eyelid up and the lens will fall into place.

To take the lens out, bend the head down, pull the corner of your eye and the lense will fall out.

Since the eyes must become adjusted gradually to the micro-glasses, a person wearing them for the first time should not leave them in longer than four or five hours. The length of time they are worn can be increased each day.

Consecutive Days Contact lenses should not be worn for consecutive days and nights. The moisture between the eyeball and the lens may evaporate leaving the lense to rest directly upon the eyeball. The eyes may then swell which would cause serious injury. Thus the wearer carries his special identification card. The price of most contact lenses is approximately $120 which includes doctor's fees.

Ag Engineer Plans Visit To Sweden

Lester Larsen, engineer-in-charge at the Ag campus tractor testing laboratory, is leaving today for Stockholm, Sweden, for a two week tour.

Larsen's first stop will be at the opening session of Sweden's Agriculture show. From there, he will travel to Ultana, Sweden, where the Agriculture School of Sweden is located.

At Ultana, Larsen plans to speak to Ag students and show slides on testing methods and agriculture procedures used in the United States.

From Ultana, Larsen will go to Eskilstuna where he will tour the machinery testing institute of Sweden and visit the Volva Tractor Company.

The Volva Company is sponsoring Larsen's trip.

Larsen will journey to Denmark the second week of his tour where he will visit the Royal Agriculture and Veterinary College in Copenhagen and an agriculture testing station at Horsens.

KUON 'Old West' Series Planned by Mari Sandoz

Nationally known author Mari Sandoz will arrive in Nebraska next week to do a series of television shows on KUON-TV.

Miss Sandoz will have two half-hour programs each week starting April 1 and running for seven weeks.

In one program, a series on "The Old West" at 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Miss Sandoz will try to help her audience understand the West by looking at the story of people first and events second.

"If you know and understand the story of your community, you will know and understand a great deal of the story of man anywhere," Miss Sandoz said.

She said she would like to restore a little of the native skepticism by which the American of the frontier managed to protect himself against "the political spieker, the lightning rod and the medicine-wagon man."

Miss Sandoz, who has been in charge of advanced novel writing during the summer sessions for 10 years at the University of Wisconsin, will discuss the techniques of creative writing at 7 p.m. each Monday.

The Nebraska author has more books than any other author on the list of One Hundred Best Books on the West. She received an honorary Doctor of Literature from the University in 1950 and the award for Distinguished Service from Native Sons and Daughters of Nebraska in 1954.

Union Plans BB Dances

Tourney Guests To Be Honored

Three basketball dances honoring high school students attending the tournament will be held today and tomorrow in the Union Ballroom.

The two evening dances will cost 50c and will begin at 9 p.m. The other dance, the Basket Bop, will be today from 3 to 5 p.m. with free admission.

Music for the afternoon dance will be furnished by Dick Moses and his Combo. Bud Holloway and Jim Ray will play for the evening dances.

Friday's dance will include two skits from Coed Follies and the Farm House Quartet. Alpha Omicron Pi will give "Mostly MacBeth" and Delta Delta Delta will present "Three's a Crowd."

Big Parade Set For Centennial

More than 4,000 people already have made plans to participate in the Lincoln Centennial parade May 2, according to Hobb Turner, chairman of the parade committee.

More than 40 floats and 25 bands have been officially entered in the parade. The parade will kick-off the big eight-day Centennial celebration.

Ho, Hum, Apathy At Kansas State

The Associated Women's Students banquet at Kansas State was cited as a sign of student apathy by the student newspaper.

Women were "encouraged" to attend the banquet by the failure to serve meals at sororities and dormitories, then "chastised" when many of them left early.

Bartoks Airs To Be Given

A contemporary music symposium featuring the music of Bartok, using recordings and string demonstrations as illustrations, will be presented today at 4 p.m. in the Social Sciences auditorium.

The symposium, the third in a series, will be moderated by Jack Crossan, assistant professor of music, and Howard Johnson of Lincoln, a graduate student in music.

The program will include "Ten Easy Pieces," "Allegro Barbaro," "Dorfszenen Songs," "Strings Quartet No. 4," "Music for Stringed, Percussion and Celesta" and "Concerts for Orchestra."

Shrub Program Planned by Ag

A cooperative program of research about ornamental shrubs was planned at a meeting held at the College of Agriculture.

Park department representatives from Omaha, Lincoln, Scottsbluff and Alliance as well as staff members from the department of horticulture and forestry attended the meeting.

First step in the new program will be releasing experimental roses to park departments this spring for evaluation and observation.

Geske Moderator Of Art Panel

Norman Geske, director of the University Art Galleries, will moderate a panel March 15 in a discussion on the Nebraska Art Association exhibition now on display at the University Galleries.

Members of the panel will be Gail Butt and Phillip Fehl, assistant professors, and Richard Trickey, instructor.

The panel will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. in Gallery B, Morrill Hall.
